HALFWAY HOME, ALL WELL ON RA

MIAMI (UPI) — Thor Heyerdahl's papyrus raft Ra today reached the halfway mark in mileage on its Atlantic crossing and completed one-third of its voyage to the Yucatan coast of Mexico.

Marine authorities said if present speed is maintained, the Ra should reach the Mexican mainland by August 21.

Sewage Treatment Plant Ordered for Clover Point

Deadline Near—Jam Here

By STEVE HUME

Take one testing station, one government deadline, some official statistics and thousands of untested cars —it all adds up to a tight squeeze.

With time rapidly running out on the provincial government's announced (and according to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson inflexible) deadline of July for all untested cars, Victoria and district drivers are scrambling to get their stickers of certification.

But calculating from figures released by the government recently, it may be impossible for the testing station at McKenzie Avenue to handle all the cars left in the five testing days remaining.

On Monday Peterson said that up to the end of May 67,279 of an estimated 80,000 vehicles registered in the Greater Victoria area had gone through the tests at the station and had been approved.

He said the station "has not been too busy lately."

LAST FEW DAYS

That leaves roughly 12,721 vehicles still not approved, give or take a few thousand that may have gone through in the last few days.

But motor vehicle branch officials say the station can handle a total of 750 cars a day, provided they don't all come at peak hours.

Even if the station could

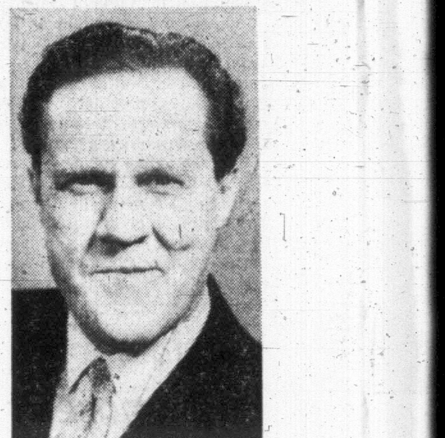
McMicking Point Also Affected

By JOHN DRISCOLL

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today flatly turned down a request that Victoria's raw sewage be dumped into the sea at Clover and McMicking Points.



LOFFMARK
. . . vetoes request

Loffmark in April permitted a $1.5 million extension to the Macaulay Point sewer outfall in Saanich to disgorge 12 million gallons of sewage daily, 4,800 feet out into Juan de Fuca Strait.

But he refused to accept the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health proposal for outfalls in Oak Bay and Victoria, unless primary sewage treatment plants are provided.

The two plants would cost an estimated $6 million.

In a letter, health board chairman Roy Elphick asked Loffmark for "urgent consideration of this most vital problem.

"It has been pointed out that there exists no conclusive medical, scientific, or engineering proof to either support or refute the necessity for primary sewage treatment," said Elphick in the application which followed a June 10 health board meeting.

"In fact the Sanitary Sewerage Study of the Greater Victoria Area has suggested the extension of the outfalls alone would be sufficient."

SEWER PROJECT

The 1966 study, commissioned by the Greater Victoria Regional Board called for a $23.5 million sewer project, but did not include any primary treatment plants.

In his reply to the health board, Loffmark merely pointed to the provincial Pollution Control Board policy of requiring the inclusion of treatment facilities in the proposed sewer reconstruction project.

Loffmark also included a press release of September, 1968, in which he stated his concern over the protection of public health due to the rapid increase of contamination of beaches in many areas of British Columbia because of raw sewage.

Elphick, an Esquimalt alderman, said today he is disappointed with Loffmark's decision.

Building treatment facilities is "uneconomical," he said.

"Why do they have a study drawn up in the first place if they aren't going to follow it?" he asked, referring to the 1966 report.

TREATMENT COSTS

"It seems Loffmark isn't concerned with costs. These treatment plants could cost billions."

"I speak for myself and the Metropolitan Board of Health and other local leaders when I say that the government should at least try extended outfalls first. If they aren't effective we

Fire Halts Missile Program

WASHINGTON (AP)—United States nuclear missile production has been halted for perhaps the rest of this year because of a crippling fire at an Atomic Energy Commission plant.

Government sources also give strong indications that testing of Safeguard anti-missile warheads may be delayed by the blaze that hit a plutonium-handling facility at Rocky Flats, Colo., May 11. The official AEC position is that Safeguard deployment schedules will not be set back.

The impact of the fire, first serious blaze at an AEC plant, was laid before Congress behind closed doors nine days later when AEC leaders asked for $45,000,000 to make repairs.

Dutch Water Supply Hit by Nerve Poison

THE HAGUE (CP-Reuters)—Four major Dutch cities switched to emergency water supplies today after a mysterious poison—believed here to be a form of nerve gas used in making insecticides in West Germany—killed millions of fish in the big River Rhine.

Dutch government officials warned city residents and farmers not to use water originating from the river for any purpose and Dutch analysts were attempting to identify the poison.

One report said some 40,000,000 fish in 250 miles of the Rhine between Mainz and Emmerich, West Germany, were killed by the chemical.

In Dusseldorf, an official of the West German state of Westphalia said the poison is a chemical which affects the respiration of fish. He said there have been no reports that it can harm humans.

George Haeringer, official of the Westphalian ministry of agriculture, which is in charge of river protection, said one of 1,000 poisons could have killed the fish.

He said despite the fact that humans may have not been reported affected, precautions against this possibility have been taken along the Rhine's banks. Campers and barge crews were warned not to use the water for any purpose. West German experts had not yet been able to identify the poison.

The poison reached the Dutch frontier Monday night. It was detected when masses of dead fish floated down the Rhine into Holland from West Germany.

Barge skippers were placed on the alert to the hazard and farmers along the river were advised to call in their cattle.

The cities of Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Dordrecht and The Hague all started to use reserve water supplies.

The Dutch news agency quoted a German Rhineland radio station as saying authorities of the West German province of Westphalia had taken similar measures.

Holland's ministry of transport and waterways said it was warned of the Rhine's pollution during normal contacts with border authorities.

NOT IDENTIFIED

The German warning of a poisonous patch in the river had not specified the nature of the pollution, the Dutch ministry added.

Campers on the Rhine's banks at Duesseldorf were warned by West German authorities Monday not to use the river for cooking, swimming or camping after the poison killed tons of fish during the weekend.

At that time, chemists were said to have been unable to identify the poison. But tests showed the chemical caused extensive damage to the nervous system of the fish.

Dr. K. C. Zijlstra, director of the Dutch state institute for the purification of waste water, said he had been in touch with the German authorities but had not been informed of the type of poison discovered.

A ministry of transport and waterways spokesman said Dr. Zijlstra had expressed surprise that the poison, if unidentified, had still not been analysed in Germany.

Dutch health authorities said fish which had been examined bled at the gills and had intestinal infection.

The poisoned area of river water is expected to flow out into the North Sea in about two days, Dutch officials said.

AIR DUEL FOLLOWS RAID

(Times News Services)

Israel and Egypt fought an air battle over the Suez Canal today following an early-morning commando raid across the canal by Egyptians and the sabotage of an oil pipeline in Haifa, Israel's main port.

Israel claimed its planes shot down an Egyptian MiG-21 in the air battle about 20 miles south of the town of Suez. An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said the MiG was seen exploding over Egyptian territory. All Israei aircraft returned safely, he said.

Egypt, however, said its planes shot down an Israeli aircraft, seen falling in the Gulf of Suez.

NEW TAX CLIPS MAY REACH HAIR

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal and provincial governments are looking longingly at yet another new tax field—a hidden sales tax on services.

But, mercifully for the taxpayer, they haven't yet found away to get around all the difficulties.

What might be taxed are haircuts and beauty treatments, auto repairs and the like.

Papers presented by the federal government to the constitutional conference of provincial premiers earlier this month said more needs to be known about the service industries before tax laws can be written to cover them. The papers were tabled in the Commons Monday by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Federal and provincial officials are being told to work out the details of how a provincial indirect commodity sales tax could be applied.

The federal papers said Ottawa is willing to let the provinces impose indirect sales taxes as well as direct taxes, if two important conditions are met.

They must not impede interprovincial or international commerce, and they must not spill over from one province into another.

Officials said there is nothing in the plan to prevent a province from applying both direct and indirect sales taxes.

Direct sales taxes, ranging from five to eight per cent of each retail sale, now are applied by all provinces except Alberta. An indirect tax would be levied on the retailer as a percentage of his gross sales.

The new indirect sales tax would be applied initially only to goods or commodities, and probably with the same exceptions of foods, drugs and some clothing as prevail for the direct sales tax.

But the extension of sales tax to services generally may be the next step. Some taxes now are levied on telephone services, for example.

Hanoi Flatly Rejects Deal With Saigon

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

PARIS — North Vietnam's chief strategist in Paris rejects in advance any compromise with the Saigon regime for using a mixed commission of Communists and non-Communists to organize a special election to decide South Vietnam's political fate.

Flat opposition to any form of compromise involving the present government in Saigon —on which the Nixon administration has pinned its hopes for a diplomatic settlement of the war—was expressed by Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho.

In an interview with the Washington Post, Tho equally ruled out any form of international supervision or participation in an election test in South Vietnam. He similarly brushed aside any prospect for formal or tacit agreement to reduce the level of fighting as long as the Nixon administration tries "to proceed from a position of strength" to end the war.

The harshest language was aimed at President Nixon personally.

Mr. Nixon's "personality" and his deeds since he has been in office, said Tho, have revealed a "warlike nature" which has produced a policy reflecting "the most warlike military circles in the United States."

TIME RUNNING OUT

Tho said that in the five months since President Nixon has been in office, he has engaged in "futile . . . manoeuvres" that "can be compared to building castles in the air."

Now time is running out on President Nixon, said Tho:

"Mr. Nixon finds himself in a vicious circle. He wants to withdraw U.S. forces from South Vietnam but he fears that the puppet army and the puppet administration will collapse. But if Mr. Nixon is determined to pursue the war, U.S. casualties will increase . . . .

"The intention of Mr. Nixon is to stay in Vietnam in order to build up the puppet army and administration that will permit the prolongation of the war. But I think that time is not on the side of Mr. Nixon.

"Now . . . what has Mr. Nixon been able to achieve in his last five months at the conference table? We may say that he has achieved nothing."

The essence of Tho's attack has been reverberating for some weeks here across the conference table. But what Tho added to it was a highly personal attack from the leading Communist policy-maker on this scene who is one of the highest ranking colleagues of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh and a veteran revolutionary whose words carry special weight in Hanoi.

PRESSURE OF DISSENT

Tho's evident objective was to maximize the pressures of American dissent and war frustration mounting on the Nixon administration, to put pressure upon Washington to accept the Viet Cong-North Vietnam 10-point plan for ending the war—most especially, to abandon the present South Vietnamese regime.

GNP Up 2.5% During Winter

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's gross national product—the market value of all goods and services produced by the country—rose by 2.5 per cent in the first three months of 1969 to reach an annual rate of $71,884,000,000 a year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The GNP for 1968 was $67,368,000,000, and Finance Minister Edgar Benson said in his June 10 budget speech he expects it to rise by about nine per cent this year. In the last three months of 1968 it was running at $70,152,000,000.

The 2.5-per-cent increase in the first quarter of 1969 included increases of about 1.5 per cent in real production and of about one per cent in price levels. This price rise was slightly greater than in the last quarter of 1968.

DBS said intensified demand pressures on the economy by most sectors was a feature of the first three months of 1969. These were partially met by a substantial increase in imports.

"Larger advances than in the fourth quarter occurred in personal expenditure, business gross fixed capital formation and exports, together with increased investment in business non-farm inventories.

"On the other hand, government purchases of goods and services rose only slightly and accumulation of farm inventories declined sharply, in part the result of much higher wheat exports."

DBS said personal expenditures rose three per cent, a substantial increase. Spending was higher on all principal products except automobiles and tobacco.

Personal spending outran increases in personal after-tax incomes, resulting in a sharp decline in personal saving.

There was a 10-per-cent increase in new residential construction which contributed to a 3½-per-cent increase in gross fixed capital formation—which includes new industrial plant and equipment as well as housing.

There was a five-per-cent increase in purchases of machinery and equipment, but a three-per-cent drop in non-residential construction.

On the incomes side of the national ledger, labor income was up three per cent. Employment rose by 1.5 per cent and the unemployment rate declined in the first quarter of 1969 to 4.2 per cent of the labor force from 4.9 per cent in the last quarter of 1968.

PROFITS WERE DOWN

Corporation profits before taxes were down slightly from their high fourth-quarter level after depreciation charges were taken into account. Profits before depreciation charges were up 1.5 per cent.

Prices—measured in the national accounts to cover all prices and not just consumer retail prices—rose one per cent in the first quarter of 1969, after an increase of eight tenths of one per cent in the previous three months.

DBS said the rate of price increase was higher in exports and in government expenditures, but lower for personal expenditures. Price change in imports and business expenditures on fixed capital remained about the same between the last three months of 1968 and the first three of this year.

On the basis of the 1957 dollar—the benchmark against which price changes are measured—the gross national product in the first quarter of 1969 ran at an annual rate of $53,716,000,000, compared with $52,956,000,000 in the final quarter of last year and $51,451,000,000 for all of 1968.

Lumber Firm Purchases Wescraft

Purchase of Victoria-based Wescraft Manufacturing Otd., 2811 Douglas, by Moore Whittington Lumber Ltd., 2614 Bridge, has been completed.

Wescraft referred all inquiries to Moore Whittington principals, none of whom were available for comment.

The acquisition had been rumored for several weeks, although the Moore Whittington name had not been mentioned.

FIFTEEN YEARS OLD

Wescraft was established about 15 years ago by Wes Bentley to make window sash from extruded aluminum stock. It developed other aluminum products for the building industry, perfecting an assembly-line method of welding aluminum, and installing anodizing and enamelling facilities for corrosion-resistant door and window products.

It expanded its sales and warehousing facilities to the lower mainland and its manufacturing to a new plant in Saanich, maintaining head office on Douglas Street.

Wescraft gross sales are estimated in excess of $1 million annually.

Moore Whittington is a long-established building supply business on southern Vancouver Island, which until about 10 years was also engaged in lumber production now absorbed by B.C. Forest Products Ltd., sawmill division. President is Ron Whittington.

handle 1,000 vehicles a day it only totals 5,000 approved before deadline. That leaves anywhere from 5,000 to 6,000 cars without their approved stickers and subject to legislation which sets the minimum penalty at a $10 fine.

A line of waiting cars this morning stretched blocks down McKenzie Avenue.

Officials were still looking on the positive side.

"All cars can definitely be handled provided they don't come in during peak periods," a spokesman said.

He said things are being partially slowed by drivers with valid stickers who are jamming line-ups with non-approved cars.

Any stickers which show an expiry date of Sept. 9 or earlier are good for an additional six months and drivers should avoid the testing station like the plague, he said.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cloud blanketed all areas this morning as B.C. lies under a layer of cool Pacific air. Showers are expected throughout the province but they will be widely scattered on the south coast. Some drying of the air will occur for Wednesday and most areas will have sunny periods. Temperatures, however, will remain cool.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET, JR.

In Canada in summer, the people love that warm weather. In Edmonton, for example, the girls flounce around in short, short skirts in 65-degree weather and the boys all go short-sleeved. And they love the long hours of daylight, when the sun sets between 9 and 10 p.m.

The summer-loving Albertans don't mind at all when the morning sky starts to get bright at about 3 a.m. The sunlight is wonderful after a winter when they saw sunlight mostly in the middle of the day. But the long hours of daylight are hard on visitors from the south.

A Texan, for example, who goes to bed at midnight in Red Deer, Alberta, is bound to wake up a few hours later as the summer daylight arrives. From then on, until it's time to get up at 7 or 8, he may sleep fitfully, squeezing his eyes against the daylight that filters in around the heaviest draperies.

In the winter, of course, he can sleep in the dark from mid-afternoon to well along into the working hours of the morning.

Every region of North America has its own special weather.

Humanity Said in Danger From Environment Crisis

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — Unless man soon grapples with a growing crisis in the human environment the future of life on earth could be endangered, Secretary General U Thant declared in the introduction to a report on environmental problems released Monday.

Major factors making for crisis, the report says, are explosive population growth, the vastly increased flow of people to the cities with attendant urban problems, and accelerated technology placing new demands on agricultural land and other natural resources.

The report is part of the preparation for a world conference on the environment, proposed for Stockholm in 1970, following General Assembly adoption of a Swedish suggestion. The Economic and Social Council will consider the report in July.

In addition to citing the dangers from DDT and other mass pesticides, the report noted that pollution is among the most serious side-effects of the new technology.

Increased reliance upon the combustion of fossil fuels has brought a 10 per cent increase in atmospheric carbon dioxide in the past century, it asserts. An increase to 25 per cent by the end of this century could take place, with potentially "catastrophic" effects on world weather and climate.

Waste products are a major source of pollution, the report states. In the United States these include 142 million tons of smoke and noxious fumes annually, 7 million junked automobiles and 48 billion tin cans.

. . . TREATMENT PLANTS

could always consider treatment plants," he said.

The health board is going to pursue the question, and a special meeting might be called next week, Elphick said.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior Victoria medical health officer, said Loffmark merely "maintained his previous stand."

"I am satisfied he did study the matter."

Dr. Whitbread said he thinks the health minister's decision "is final as far as the minister is concerned."

Asked whether the decision is final as far as the health board is concerned, Dr. Whitbread said:

"We'll have to wait until the board meets again in September to know that."

In turning down the health board request, Loffmark made good a promise made last October that he would take a "hard line against any opposition to primary treatment plants."

"Make no mistake about it," he said. "Either municipalities will provide satisfactory plants or no sewage construction certificates will be issued."

The initial decision in April this year to permit the Macaulay Point sewer extension without primary treatment while disallowing McMicking and Clover Point resulted in a bitter reaction from Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen and Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hawes.

Stephen called it a "totally irrational decision."

A primary treatment plant at Clover Point in Victoria would cost an additional $2.5 million.

In his policy statement last year Loffmark declared that it would not be in the public interest to grant sewer construction certificates unless "a minimum of primary treatment is provided."

Film on Good Life, Gaglardi on Agenda

The film is the government-financed "The Good Life" which extols the beauties of life in British Columbia. Opposition Leader Tom Berger has attacked the film as "Socred propoganda."

The minister is Philip Gaglardi, who will be guest speaker.

Esquimalt Socreds are expected to nominate deputy speaker Herb Bruch, who has held the riding since 1953.

The New Democratic Party, on May 12, chose taxi operator James Gorst as Esquimalt candidate.

Gorst, who was president of the Esquimalt-Saanich Federal Liberal Association from 1960 to 1968 bolted to the NDP after being refused the federal liberal nomination for the 1968 election.

He won the Liberal nomination at a nomination meeting at which he was chairman. His candidacy was over-ruled and at a later meeting David Anderson won the nomination.

Anderson also won the election in the Trudeau sweep of June 1968.

The Liberals have not yet chosen a candidate, following a policy of waiting until an election has been called or appears imminent before choosing candidates in the lower Island area.

Although Premier Bennett has said the odds are 60-40 in favor of an election this year he has also said an election is more likely next year than this year.

The Liberal candidate in the 1966 provincial election won by Bruch, David Elrix, has moved out of the riding and is not expected to seek the nomination.

No Solution in Sight On Taxation Issue

Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hawes and provincial assessor Percy Wright met for a discussion on Oak Bay assessments this morning.

Mayor Hawes said the meeting was requested by Oak Bay "to discuss the formula policy on assessments."

"At this point there doesn't seem to be any easy answer to the problem."

He was referring to the complaints received from taxpayers who had received abnormally high increases in their 1969 assessments.

He said council will continue its study of the assessment situation.

"We're compiling information on the letters we've received, and the rolls."

The provincial assessor, he added, had recommended no solution.

When the study is completed, the mayor added, details will be

Phone Supervisors Ready If Strike Reaches Island

Supervisiory personnel at Island exchanges of B.C. Telephone have been put on full alert in case of walkouts by regular staff, a company spokesman said today.

Glynn Jones, Victoria-based public information officer, said supervisors have been given crash courses in handling equipment in the event of a walkout.

"I'm confident we'll be able to duplicate activities on the mainland, with supervisory staff taking over at the switchboards to keep services in smooth and efficient operation," he said.

He said local company officials are still awaiting developments in the mainland strike that Monday took members of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers out of exchanges from Squamish to Hope.

On the lower mainland the striking workers are confining their activity for the present to the Fraser Valley, Vancouver and Howe Sound.

POLICY MAKERS

Bert Johns, one of three general secretaries of the federation who act as strike policy makers, said the next move in the dispute is up to B.C. Telephone.

He said federal mediator D. S. Tysoe met with him briefly Monday night after taking with management spokesmen, but no sign of a break was forthcoming.

The strike was called for Monday morning after contract negotiations collapsed Saturday.

Telephone workers representing 6,200 plant, clerical and traffic employees of B.C. Telephone rejected a conciliation report prosposing a 17.5 per cent wage increase over two years.

The federation asked for 32.1 per cent, plus fringe benefits.

Meanwhile mainland supervisory staff face more 12-hour shifts doing unfamiliar jobs normally handled by 3,800 regular workers.

IN OTHER AREAS

There was no indication of plans to pull out workers in other areas, however.

The union had said it would use rotation strikes, a series of hit-and-run stoppages by large or small groups of its 6,200 members.

Supervisors were at the switchboards Monday. There were delays and foulups in handling calls but the company said the 120 men, doing work normally performed by 180-190 operators, were speeding up.

"These men have never seen a switchboard in their lives before this," said one company official.

The B.C. Federation of Telephone Employees said it had not decided how long the lower mainland strike will last. Employees could be sent back at short notice and others called out elsewhere.

The area covered by the strike Monday included the heavily-populated greater Vancouver area.

The conciliation officer held out no hope for settlement unless both sides ease positions. Current wages range from $1.45 an hour to $5.98 in a wide range of jobs.

subcommittee members the impact on the weapons production schedule would last "a few months to perhaps a year," according to preliminary estimates.

Senator Allen Ellender (Dem. La.) asked Giller: "Will this fire retard you in the production of all missiles?"

Giller's immediate words in reply were deleted from the published transcript but then he said: "We are estimating at this moment six months plus or minus three, meaning a maximum of maybe nine."

Dr. Glenn Seaborg, AEC chairman, termed the $45,000,000 request to get the Rocky Flats plant back into operation "very urgent."

"If we didn't receive the additional appropriation it would delay by an undetermined amount the production dates (deleted)," Seaborg said.

Senator Robert Byrd (Dem. W. Va.), chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, told a reporter Monday night: "I regard this as a serious situation."

Giller said the disruption of Rocky Flats work would not affect the Nixon administration's 1974 deployment schedule for the proposed Safeguard missile defence system.

Clown-for-a-Day Reporter Finds Pros Behind Make-Up

By ROBIN BURGESS

Give the kid a thrill.

She giggled and I felt rewarded. This was going to be fun.

After all, here I was, my cub reporter personality concealed behind a professionally made-up junior Bozo clown face and a pair of baggy pants. I was a Shrine clown for an afternoon in Memorial Arena.

"Just follow me into the ring," instructed "Chuckles," alias John Facer, the circus public relations man and my guide for the day.

Chuckles was a solemn clown with orange glasses and a lifetime of clowning experience.

Suddenly we were in the middle of the arena and it wasn't just one little girl giggling but hundreds of boys and girls, and somebody was handing me a dummy bomb with a very real, smouldering firecracker in the middle.

My show biz debut—it was no time to be nervous.

Just as quickly I was standing in the wings again, watching Clyde Clayton, a younger clown in a curly beatle wig, and Rex Young, boss clown, soberly and professionally arrange the props for our next number.

"Clowning is a serious business," Rex Young told me later as he retouched his makeup in his cluttered home-cum-workshop on wheels in the back of a truck.

"We try to keep up with the times with our act," he said, and his voice sounded gentle in such a huge frame. "Reaction to any number varies. Sometimes you knock them dead and sometimes the same joke won't go over in another town 100 miles away."

He introduced Caboose, the long-suffering basset hound that will sit placidly through everything from loud explosions to motorized bathtubs.

Even as clowns go Rex Young is a veteran.

"My dad was a clown and when I was about four I had greasepaint on," he said.

As producer of the clown act it is Young's responsibility to dream up routines and provide props.

"I keep waking up in the middle of the night with ideas for the act," he laughed.

"Most of my inspiration comes from life. I see an incident on the street and build a gag on it."

He whisked away my stylish flared white jacket and handed me a short bandsman's coat for the final clown band number.

Every clown in the show was drafted into the motley crew.

Lee Marx, son of one of the greatest clowns, Karl Marx, ambled his unhappy way, while Jimmie Armstrong, one of the "little people," played trumpet and, much to the children's delight, made a complete nuisance of himself when the "bandmaster's" back was turned.

Polish and timing were perfect. Notes squeaked on plan and a well-rehearsed performance took on the appearance of a spontaneous slapstick.

Afterwards in the dressing room as we removed our makeup (just-wash-off-water-soluble-variety) the real clowns talked about show business experiences.

"My father, my grandfather and my great-grandfather were in the circus," said Maynard.

"I tried a regular job once but I couldn't take earning $70 to $80 a week and working eight hours a day for it."

As my face gradually became my own again I could hear someone mention with regret the death of Judy Garland, one of show business' greats. One clown spoke of playing at a theatre right after her show. A fellow performer, a colleague, was dead.

Outside Fires Spark Debate

Esquimalt council agreed Monday that burning running shoes and wet garbage is a pretty revolting thing to do.

But aldermen admitted they had no idea how to regulate rubbish burning.

A letter of complaint about open-air garbage burning sparked the discussion of smouldering rubbish at a council meeting.

Ald. William Bell suggested establishing a pollution committee to deal with letters like that of Mrs. Millicent E. Hawley.

Mrs. Hawley complained that when her neighbors burned rubbish she and her husband were driven inside on warm summer nights because of the smell.

'CURSE OF BURNERS'

"I ask you," she asked," is any one of us subjected to any greater pollution than the curse of outdoor garbage-burners?"

Mayor Ray Bryant said framing legislation which permitted the burning of only certain types of rubbish would be tricky.

"We don't want to penalize the outdoor barbecue people," he said. "I admit my cooking sometimes smells pretty bad but. . . ."

Ald. Edward DeCosta said he hasn't burned anything outside in five years and never would.

"And I think it's about time we strongly supported some sort of bylaw, at least, which will restrict garbage burning."

Ald. Roy Elphick said burning paper wasn't bad as the odor and smoke are fleeting but he expressed horror at people who burn such things as running shoes.

SPECIFY WHAT KIND

If a bylaw was drawn up "we'd have to specify what kind of garbage can be burned."

"How we'd enforce such regulations is beyond me," he said.

"I'm all for open-air burning," said Ald. Arthur Young.

He said garbage disposal costs would increase considerably if an over-all ban was imposed.

H suggested a public education drive to warn people what they should and should not burn. Milk cartons would definitely be out, he said.

Finally Bryant said the matter should be referred for further study to the public works committee.

HAVE SOME EFFECT

Bryant said the public works committee was the place to start investigating the question. The municipal engineer should check pollution regulations with the Pollution Control Board before any action is taken, he added.

During summer months open air bonfires are restricted to between 6 a.m. and 9 a.m. daily.

Council earlier rejected an offer by Garden City Ambulance to take over the municipality's ambulance service.

Ald. Walter Lock said the Esquimalt police and firemen offer excellent ambulance service and have adequate equipment.

"They can have a car anywhere in the municipality in two minutes," said Lock. He said he doubted that any other service could make that claim.

Two years ago a similar request to council was turned down as being to costly and unnecessary.

Water Ski Regulations Supported

What was billed as a battle between water skiers and their opponents didn't happen that way in Saanich council chambers Monday night.

Both sides came ready for conciliation.

Roy Wooton, representing the Elk Lake Ratepayers Association, which was expected to seek a ban on motorized sports on the lake, commended the restrictions the municipality is considering.

So did the water skiers.

Restrictions include permits for boats over 10 horsepower, protection of swimming zones and the water intake area for Saanich Peninsula, from motor boats a set course for skiing and stiff penalties for offenses.

BYLAW PROPOSALS

The proposals, plus suggestions from the floor of Monday's open hearing, will be considered for a new bylaw, once the municipality gets legal advice on the validity of the restrictions.

Not only did the skiers favor regulations, but one suggested a fee of less than $5 be charged for a boat permit. Ron Sherring of 569 Broadway suggested the fee could be used to put up a dock or a raft for the skiers' use.

Grant Fenwick, of the British Columbia region of the Canadian Water Skiing Association, said skiers who use the lake regularly are policing it themselves. "They believe they'll lose the lake if they don't," he said.

They "politely" inform violators what they're doing wrong, and will report the boat's registration number to police if they continue to defy regulations, he said.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said it will be "some weeks" before a bylaw governing the lakes, if passed, comes into effect. He told the 20 people at the meeting he would prefer not having to impose regulations.

'SO MANY DEMANDS'

"But there are so many demands on this lake. And as population grows, there will be more," he said. "We have every use, except loading wheat for Red China."

He made it clear that regulations would be imposed, not to restrict activities on the lake, but to organize them.

Two complaints were raised about use of the lake, but neither of them were about water skiers.

A resident of Prospect Lake suggested that regulations be imposed on boats less than 10 horsepower. She said she had seen an increase in hydroplanes that get high speed out of low-powered engines.

And the supervisor of a Saanich lakeshore playground asked that rowboats be banned from the nearby beach. She said children swimming there had had narrow escapes when rowboats came near and almost clubbed them with oars.

Welfare Start 'Years Late'

Greater involvement by regional governments in welfare corrections, job training and education should have started three years ago, said Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant Monday.

He made the comment at a council meeting after reading a letter from Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell stressing the importance of the regional district concept and emphasizing "co-ordination" of social service and land use policies.

"I interpret it as a warning that the regional board might have to go into these three fields (welfare corrections, job training and education) in the future," said Bryant.

"I welcome it but add it should have happened three years ago."

BLAST SHATTERS 11 WINDOWS

The accident, which took place at Douglas and View during routine blasting procedures on the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce construction site, occurred when an explosive charge hit a loose pocket of earth in otherwise solid bedrock.

The resulting concussion and hail of rock fragments smashed in 11 windows of the Sayward Building, but no injuries were reported.

He said he had previously complained about blasting on the site and didn't feel sufficient safety precautions were taken.

Ken Oliver, of Oliver Equipment Service & Supply, said blasting years ago created the clay pockets, with the result that there was no way to prevent the tricky explosion.

Ballet Wins Applause

PARIS (CP) — Les Grand Ballets European Canadiens, now in Rome on the troupe's continuing European tour, will return to Paris for extra performances Friday and Saturday following an improved reception during the late stages of its regularly scheduled stay in the French capital.

The newspaper Combat today salutes the organization's climatic performance Saturday at the Theatre des Champs Elysees, citing in support of its verdict the 10 curtain calls given the Montreal dancers on that occasion.

Full houses in the final half of the troupe's 11-day Paris stay encouraged the idea of a return engagement, which will precede the performers' return home.

Combat says fortune has smiled on Les Grands Ballets in Paris, and that this turn of events is a just one.

2-Year Term For Arson

George B. Bruce, 43, of 5013 Cordova Bay Road, was sentenced to two years in prison in central court Monday on two charges of arson.

"I realize you had no intention of causing harm of any sort to any other person, but it's a very serious offence," Magistrate William Ostler told him.

Bruce had pleaded guilty to arson charges after a blaze destroyed two houses at Bruce's address several weeks ago. They belong to Mrs. J. P. Rica Bruce.

Damage to the two houses was estimated at $15,000 plus $1,500 and $100 to two adjoining properties.

A Fuse Is Lighted

THERE STILL REMAINS A possibility that Prime Minister Ian Smith of Rhodesia may make a final effort to negotiate further with Britain before his country takes the irreversible formal step to independence. But there is no mistaking the emphatic response of Rhodesia's white population in voting nearly four-to-one in favor of becoming a republic without any ties to Britain, and nearly three-to-one in favor of a constitution which bars the country's black population from ever gaining political control.

With this vote, therefore, Rhodesia's white people have set themselves to the task of stemming the tide of the twentieth century, of preserving Rhodesia as an island of white supremacy in a continent that is predominantly black and self-governing, and in all probability of condemning themselves or their children ultimately to a lethal struggle to defend the anachronistic political fortress which they have set up.

There are about 230,000 white residents in Rhodesia, compared with more than 4-million blacks. In all the rest of the vast continent, except for the adjacent country of South Africa and a Portuguese colonial holdover, the native black people have largely taken over the management of their affairs with varying success. To turn the clock back in this regard would be virtually impossible and certainly temporary; to hold out against the "winds of change" — in the striking phrase of Britain's one-time Prime Minister Harold Macmillan— must be an equally short-term endeavor.

The white people of Rhodesia may well be able to survive the political and economic repercussions aroused by cutting outside ties with Britain; but they face a much more elemental force within their own country in the eventual reaction of the 18-to-1 majority of black people. And closely allied with that will be the reaction of the independent black states throughout the continent which will see Rhodesia — as they already view South Africa — as an affront to African dignity, and a political cancer demanding surgery.

United Nations Secretary-General U Thant regards Rhodesia's referendum results as "a deplorable step in the wrong direction", and "a threat to peace which cannot and must not be ignored". Economic sanctions have not proved effective against Rhodesia's breakaway government because they have been haphazardly applied by most countries, and consistently evaded by means of aid from South Africa. But the very failure of sanctions increases the likelihood of more direct action by black African states.

The Rhodesian revolution remains a paradox. Mr. Smith led his white people in an ostensible struggle to throw off the vestiges of colonial control by Britain. But it was not a struggle which the proponents of liberty and self-determinism in other countries could applaud, for it was not so much a fight for true freedom as a fight for a free hand in perpetuating the subjugation of millions of black people. And that is how history will view it, when at some future date the inevitable final chapter is written.

Save Our Seas

IN THE FURORE WHICH FOLLOWED disclosure by the U.S. Army that it planned to dump a quantity of surplus poison gas off the East Coast, most attention was focussed on the method of transporting it. It was pointed out that carrying the gas by train to the coast involved some frightening risks. But what about the idea of using the ocean as a dump? It now appears the Army did not do its homework on this aspect of the operation either.

Army officials testified before a Congressional committee that a thorough advance study had been made into the safety of sinking mustard and nerve gas in surplus freighter hulls. But now a number of scientists consulted on the plan have disclosed that evidence presented to the committee was gathered from a review held after Army officials had been called to appear. In view of some of the questions raised later by the scientists, the Army's reassurances are something less than reassuring.

Dr. Bostwick Ketchum, of the National Science Foundation, said of the Army presentation there were gaps "even in the most obvious areas, such as the terminal velocity of those ships when they hit the bottom, let alone what the impact effect would be on the gas containers."

Another scientist consulted by the military authorities was Dr. Akiro Okubo of Johns Hopkins University, who said that the unpredictability of ocean depths makes the project highly questionable. An error of ten per cent in Army computations could result in "appreciable surface contamination."

Another disturbing disclosure is that twelve similar dumps, three of poison gas and nine of explosives, were carried out in the 25 years before the present controversy. Charts of the Eastern continental shelf now are dotted with areas labelled "Explosives Dumping Area."

Now that the whole question has been brought into the open the practice of indiscriminate ocean dumping should be halted. Somewhere a line must be drawn if the oceans are not to become cesspools. That line should be drawn now.

Surveying Crime and Violence

THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION on strife and violence in the United States has pointed up a number of paradoxes with at least one element furnishing grounds for hope. There is now, the report of the commission indicates, probably more constructive concern in the country than ever before on the subject of American violence. From that concern there should emerge positive programs of correction.

Among the paradoxes: The United States ranks first among 17 Western democracies in the extent of strife, but the death rate is only 1.1 per million compared with 2.4 per million in Europe. Violence in the United States is frequent but less disruptive than in many other lands. The United States has much spontaneous rebelling but very little planned rebellion.

While strife in some categories has declined markedly (in labor disputes and agrarian and frontier-type violence) it has risen sharply in urban racial categories. Although Americans have a record of violence, the United States has been a relatively stable republic.

The current assessment underscores the need for improvement but also manages to establish a measure of balance. The recommendations, calling for firmness in legal social control combined with steps to meet legitimate social grievances, echo recommendations heard before but seldom implemented. The question now, of course, is whether Americans, moving to a better recognition of the prevalence of crime and violence in their history, will come up with an effective remedy.

FROM OTTAWA

BY MAURICE WESTERN

A New Canadian War in the Air

IN an address to a service club here, John Gilmer, president and chief executive officer of CP Air, has taken sharp issue with proposals advanced last month by Yves Pratte, board chairman of Air Canada. Mr. Pratte's general thought was that Canada needs a single international airline and that CP Air should concentrate on the domestic routes. The one, big, interoceanic monopoly is not, as Mr. Jamieson told the House last month, government policy. But it is highly probable that Mr. Pratte's idea may have its attractions for some in government since the record shows very clearly that in this field Ottawa's enthusiasm for competition has always been strictly limited.

Western

It was in 1965 that Mr. Pickersgill, having won the agreement of the two carriers, divided the globe rather in the manner of Alexander VI after the voyages of Columbus.

The decision is now being challenged since Mr. Pratte wishes to expand into areas (such as the Pacific and Latin America) reserved for CP Air by the present chairman of the Canadian Transport Commission.

In fact, Air Canada in now eager to serve the entire globe although it is anxious at the same time to dispense with money-losing routes in the home country.

There were those, in 1965, who felt that the state line was anything but a loser in this division of spoils; an impression strengthened by the purrs of satisfaction from Air Canada headquarters.

Pickersgill Principles

In any case the major carrier appeared to be in no grave danger since the whole policy was governed by a set of principles earlier enunciated by Mr. Pickersgill.

One of these outlawed on domestic runs "the kind of competition that would put TCA (now Air Canada) in the red." Another provided that, in the international field, services "should not be competitive or conflicting but should represent a single integrated plan".

But times change and in regard to this policy, as in other matters, the views of Air Canada change with them.

Mr. Pratte's speech is a plain indication of an unhappiness which has evidently developed since 1965. and seems to have been sharpened by CP Air's plans for expanding into territories clearly marked out for it in 1965.

Mr. Gilmer's counter-proposition may strike objective observers as eminently fair. He says that if Air Canada has a grievance, CP Air is ready to switch.

This certainly betters any offer made by Spain to Portugal after the earlier memorable division of the world.

It is evident, however, that the offer, though generous, does not meet Mr. Pratte's demand which is that CP Air should fade out of international business. As the Air Canada chairman inaccurately told a Montreal audience: "We should examine how much it costs Canadians to support two international airlines when all other countries have only one airline except the United States."

Virtue of Competition

The virtue of competition is that it tends to hold down costs. It sometimes has other virtues also, as many travellers discovered when Air Canada was recently grounded by a protracted strike. Since we have a "single, integrated plan," as Mr. Pickersgill so carefully explained, it is difficult to see how anyone can argue that this is a case in which competition is out of hand.

In fact, co-operation is so close that one can buy a CP Air ticket to Europe and return by Air Canada from a different European point. There are also arrangements with other carriers since Canadian airlines appear to operate with greater efficiency in getting people to Europe than in getting them back.

Some more devoted customers of Air Canada may be attracted by the argument that CP Air could be compensated on less remunerative domestic routes for its proposed exclusion from the wider world. That this is utter nonsense Mr. Gilmer easily demonstrates.

"Adoption of such a policy would definitely mean the end of effective competition on Canada's transcontinental services . . . The reason for this lies in the simple fact that the average traveller greatly prefers single carrier service and therefore, in a situation in which only one carrier had access to both the international markets and the trans-continental market, that carrier would find it relatively simple to capture for its transcontinental operation the international origins or destinations."

In his report to Parliament of February, 1969, Mr. Pratte referred to questions of competition and of domestic regional air services and observed: "The company welcomes the indication of the federal government that it is prepared to review these matters in the light of changing conditions."

It was not appreciated at the time that Mr. Pratte had in mind such drastic changes. The government has many matters now under review and there is nothing in the report to suggest that this particular matter is deserving of very high priority.

In fact Air Canada, carefully protected in its operations, reported its sixth successive profit and its 15th in 18 years. Its net income more than doubled; its return on investment increased eight per cent; traffic on southern services including those to Bermuda and Florida were up 43 per cent; traffic on the Atlantic 13 per cent.

"The future", reported Mr. Pratte, "is filled with promise and there is every reason to expect that the rapid growth of the air transportation in industry during the past decade will continue and even accelerate."

It will be difficult to make out of this glowing report a case for challenging Mr. Pickersgill's historic work.

One could argue instead that what we need is more competition and more landing rights for more carriers in more places for the benefit of the long-suffering public.

Poisoned by Our Progress

Toronto Star

We Canadians have traditionally been careless about our environment because we have so much of it. Raze a woodland here, pollute a stream there—it didn't seem to matter much; there were always more to go on to.

Only lately, as we clustered into cities, have we begun to realize that man-made pollutants, seen and unseen, can menace our very lives, and that the despoiling of nature in Canada's great outdoors can rob us of healthful recreations . . .

Since the authority to take action is divided between Ottawa and the provinces, it would be best if the two levels of government jointly sponsored such an investigation. We suggest that that a commission be appointed to report on:

- The nature and extent of the pollution of the human environment in Canada, particularly the contamination of air, water, food and other products for human consumption.
- The specific sources of contaminants, their geographic distribution and the population groups exposed to them.
- The apparent effects of pollution on disease rates, particularly cancer, lung and heart diseases.
- The influence of smoking, drinking and diet on diseases which appear to be related to environmental contamination.
- The present and potential cost to the national economy of the illnesses, disabilities and premature deaths that are found to be related to pollution.
- The economic and social cost of eliminating the sources of environmental hazards to public health.
- Recommendations for reduction and control of existing harmful pollutants and of the introduction of new ones, as well as methods of protecting humans against them.

All that is a big order, amounting probably to several years' work for a competent commission. But there is one thing we may be sure of: the longer knowledge and remedial action are delayed, the more difficult and costly will be the solutions. And failure to act could produce this epitaph for our civilization: "Poisoned by its own progress."

THE THIEU-KY OBSTACLE

BY TOM WICKER

Blocking a 'Government of Reconciliation'

TRAN NGOC LIENG is a slender, intense man who keeps a law office in his pleasant villa on a street near downtown Saigon. As a lawyer, he defended Truong Dinh Dzu, the presidential candidate who was thrown in jail for advocating a coalition government with the National Liberation Front; as an activist, he is a member of a most unusual committee of Catholic and Buddhist leaders working to free Thich Thien Minh, a monk jailed on political charges; and as a politician, Lieng is the official leader of the Progressive Nationalist Committee, which advocates a new "government of reconciliation" for South Vietnam.

Wicker

Lieng makes no effort to hide his dim view of the Thieu-Ky regime. Sitting under one of the revolving overhead fans that cool the high-ceilinged Saigon villas even in the brutal heat of Southeast Asia, he was asked by one recent visitor whether the present government had any support at all among the South Vietnamese people.

"Certainly not," Lieng replied, without hesitation. And when asked if he was expressing this and other pungent views for publication, he replied at some length that he was anxious to be quoted, that South Vietnam was in such bad shape that the consequences to him did not matter; what was important was that the world should know about the political repressions and lack of support of the Thieu-Ky regime.

Some informed Saigon political figures are not sure whether Lieng's patriotism or his political ambition moves him the most. For the moment, however, his activities have put him on a collision course with President Thieu; now Thieu has struck back by summoning four close associates of Lieng for national police questioning; and all of this suggests much of what is wrong with South Vietnamese politics and the American role in Saigon.

'Nationalist' Salvation

This is because Lieng is equally outspoken in his opposition to the Vietnamese Communists, is opposed to a coalition government because he fears the Communists would take it over, and believes that the real salvation of South Vietnamese freedom lies in "nationalist" forces that are not Communist but that give no real support to Thieu and his American-sponsored regime.

He compares such South Vietnamese nationalists to "grains of sand — innumerable but separate. Defeating the Communists politically, Lieng believes, will require that they be unified behind leaders they respect and a program they can support — neither of which he finds in the Thieu-Ky regime. Hence, the Progressive Nationalist Committee's proposal for a "government of reconciliation," composed of men acceptable both to the NLE and to non-Communists (Gen. Duong Van Minh is frequently cited as one such man), and empowered to prepare and organize elections to determine the political future of South Vietnam.

Fire and Brimstone

Lieng talked of these ideas politely and with restraint to a visiting American, but there was ample fire and brimstone in the remarks of two of Lieng's younger associates — Chau Tam Luang, Secretary General of the committee and widely considered its "action man," and Le Duy Tam, who, ironically, perfected his fluent English while teaching Vietnamese for the State Department in Washington. Luang, at least, was one of those summoned by Thieu's national police.

Luang and Tam asserted in uncompromising language that the greatest political difficulty for nationalist forces is the adamant and overpowering American political, military and economic support for the Thieu regime. While that support continues, they bitterly insisted, few Vietnamese believe it possible either to oust Thieu or to force him to abandon the repressive police tactics that alienate the South Vietnamese pople — much less persuade him to broaden the appeal of his government by bringing into it Buddhist leaders or men like Minh. And that, they said, is why it is so difficult to organize an effective non-Communist opposition, and why the real strength of non-Communist forces in Vietnam is not being organized for the ultimate "political competition" with the NLF.

Baleful Irony

If this is accurate (and many Vietnamese were eager to tell an American, a few weeks ago, that it was all too accurate), what a final baleful irony may be added to the long and tragic record of American folly in Vietnam! If in backing the military-oriented, politically repressive Thieu regime against all pressures and until the last muffled groan, the United States succeeds only in easing the way for a Communist government in South Vietnam, the bankruptcy of Cold War diplomacy will have been reached not with a bang but a whimper.

Looking Back

From the Times, June 24, 1909.

Whaling on the west coast has improved considerably during the last week. Steamer Tees brought word today that the steamer Orion brought in seven whales at one tow on the 15th, and that they would have had seven more had not the fog shut down on them as they were busy among the whale schools. This brought the number caught at Seschart up to 127.

Free Schools—Two Views

* * * * * *

By TOM DURRIE

Director of the Saturna Island Free School, Mr. Durrie wrote this article for the B.C. Teacher

An unprecedented and strange educational phenomenon is occurring in and around Vancouver these days. It is the emergence and the proliferation of free schools.

Those of us who are involved in free schools think we are doing an important, radical and permanent thing.

Do our schools and their ways pose a serious threat to established education, or are we merely a harmless lunatic fringe?

Since 1966 no fewer than ten free schools have been started in Vancouver, some by teachers and some by students themselves.

At present there are six free schools here and two more in Victoria, all going strong and looking pretty permanent.

It is true that these schools involve fewer than 200 youngsters, but there is more to it than mere numbers.

A Breeze Is Blowing

In each group of children and staff there is an air of something important happening — an air that just may be the fresh breeze that will blow the chalkdust and pencil shavings out of the silent corridors of institutionalized education.

Is the breeze felt yet within the hallowed halls? Will it become a hurricane?

Most of us in free schools are outspoken in our criticism of traditional educational methods and of the reluctance of the public schools and their teachers to change.

George Leonard, in his Education and Ecstasy, is brutal in his condemnation of what goes on in public schools; Paul Goodman has said that the educational system will not change until the students burn down the schools; A. S. Neill places the blame for many of the world's problems on traditional directive education.

It is easy to criticize, perhaps; but it is certainly not easy to offer alternatives. What are we doing in the free schools that is so different from what you are doing in the public schools?

Voice Equal to Staff

All free schools have at least one thing in common and that is that the students usually don't have to do anything they don't want to do, and they are given a voice at least equal to that of the staff in the way the school should be run.

To put it more positively, youngsters are given approval and support for doing what they want to do.

Imagine, if you will, a school in which the teacher is not an authority, where children will start to learn to read only when they want to, even if they are 13 years old.

Many people have regarded the free approach as a kind of innovative, perhaps daring, method for achieving the old goals of education. The assumption is that if you let the kids do what they want, they will soon enough become bored, see the error of their ways and rush for the classes, the assignments and the projects.

I think that most of us who have worked in a free situation with children have found that they don't become bored with being themselves and that they don't want classes.

They don't want to be "taught", no matter how attractively we present the educational package.

Working with love . . . the author and his charges

This is why I am very skeptical of the latest liberalizing trends in public education, such as those represented by the BCTF's report, Involvement — The Key To Better Schools.

Liberalized schools, like the kids-will-get-bored fallacy, make the mistake of thinking that new trimmings on the package make a new product. This is why so many experiments with "free" education in public schools haven't "Worked".

If you expect to use freedom and permissiveness as tricks to get the same old results, you are bound to be disappointed. And I predict that all your attempts to make school more fun for the kids and to turn the teacher into the good guy will fail, because you haven't yet taken a look at your goals.

Different in Kind

I think that what we're doing in free schools is different in kind and in purpose from what you are doing in the public schools. We are not just using a different method to do the same thing that you are trying to do. The basic assumptions which determine our goals are different.

Even in the most liberal and "progressive" of public school thinking there is the underlying assumption that children have to be taught certain things, such as the three Rs, before they can grow into acceptable adults or, as I believe you woul put it, responsible citizens.

"Could it be that "a responsible citizen" is just someone who won't cause trouble?

Of course, it then becomes our duty as adults and preservers of the social order to make sure that our young grow up to be people who fit into our existing society.

You are, after all, often accused of emphasizing conformity at the expense of individuality. You don't like children who talk back, do you? As I said, the assumption is that children must be taught.

People have accused me of shirking my duty as an adult because I don't try to get children to learn to read or add or whatever.

Now, this suggests two things to me. One is that there are certain right and approved ways of growing up, such as learning to read when you are six, not talking back, not dropping out, and so on.

The other is that adults, expecially teachers and parents, know how to live in the right way and children don't.

If it is true that the adults know the best ways of growing up and living, I suppose it is inevitably their duty to regulate and direct the lives of children. Sort of like the white man bringing "civilization" to the Indian?

A key phrase in involvement is "With the approval of the teacher". Helen Bumphrey has been quoted as saying, "The children in my class may do whatever they like, as long as they do their best". And who decides what is best?

To carry this one step further, the catch phrase of current educational liberals is "Freedom with responsibility".

To me this means, "You are free to do what you like—er, as long as you do what you're told". After all, who is doing the deciding about what is responsibility?

In a free school we say in effect to the children, "You are free to be yourself and to do what you like. I trust that you know better than I do what is best for you". The responsibility for making decisions about individual matters is left to the individual.

Before a child's forced entrance into school at the arbitrary age of six or seven, learning has usually been suffused with joy and enthusiasm.

In most instances the child has not been under pressure to accomplish, and, depending upon his home, he has been relatively free to use toys and play in whatever way he wanted to.

In school all this changes, learning now becomes something that someone else tells him to do; it is removed from the child's sphere of concern.

His concern must necessarily become not learning, but getting rewards and avoiding punishment.

No wonder the average child's interest in school declines steadily after the first week!

Look at your schools and look at your children. Are the schools really run for the benefit of the children? If so, why is it necessary to make attendance compulsory with stiff penalties for non-attendance?

Don't Want Holidays

Our students love school, they don't want holidays and recesses. School for them is a place of joy and delight. What do the free schools say to you? We say: Throw away your keys, your timetables, your straps, your report cards, your scholarships and attendance awards.

Get rid of your curricula, your grades, your detentions, your levels and promotions, your sequential learning experiences, your audio-visual aids.

Make attendance at school absolutely voluntary; if what you have is good, the children will beat down the door to get it.

Tear up your registers and your examinations. Forget trying to improve yourselves and others. Still your bells and orders forever!

Take your children in your arms and love them, do with them the things they want to do, play with them, let them love you. Start to grow and learn together.

Can you survive without the crutches your system provides? That is the challenge the free schools offer.

. . . Or of Dreariness?

By MARY KEOHANE
New Republic

LEISTON, England—Pilgrims from all over the world come here to see Summerhill, the "free school" described in the books of A. S. Neill.

Here, these books say, children grow happily unhampered by adult-devised rules and curricula.

Here, according to the quotation of his book-jackets, "its founder has proved (despite much discouragement and revilement) one simple truth—freedom works."

A New York Summerhill Society lists schools that "follow the Summerhill philosophy," and Neill's books have been translated into the major languages of the world —including Japanese.

The place seemed deserted. A little hesitantly, I opened the front door, to be met by the sound of a Beatles record from somewhere upstairs, and the sight of a large uncurtained room furnished only with a gymnasium horse and a ladder of sorts.

On one wall was a mostly bare bulletin-board; a typed list of house mothers with their charges; a plea not to go swimming alone; a handwritten schedule of classes, listing conventional school subjects—history, English, Latin, French, biology, chemistry, physics and mathematics—as well as workshop and handcrafts.

I proceeded down the long hall. An open door to my left led into a kind of Common Room.

Again, the windows were uncurtained and the walls and floors were bare, but there were several pieces of furniture: a sofa with its slip-cover half torn off, a chair with the brown leatherette ripped from one arm to reveal the board frame, two or three upholstered pieces with their springs exposed.

To my right was the dining-room: bare white-painted walls, high metal backless stools, linoleum-topped tables.

Leaving by the side door, I walked past the overgrown cabbage patch to the shed which housed the history class.

It seemed to house science also, for on the wide windowsill a very dusty microscope stood beside sliding, unsteady heaps of ragged books.

A young man with the build of a football player approached.

"Are you Oliver?" He nodded. "May I sit in on your class?"

"I can't teach with visitors around."

Proceeding past another side of the cabbage patch to Audrey's room in a frame one-story addition, I encountered a locked door.

Ulla's needlework group met in her own bedroom on the second floor of the main building. A girl of about 16 was stitching a shift on the sewing machine; two others sprawled on the bed awaiting their turns; a fourth appealed for help in pinning a collar pattern to the cloth.

One of the girls had a racking cough. "What do you do when your children are sick?" I asked.

"There's a hospital in Ipswich (20 miles away). But the children are hardly ever sick. Sickness is mostly psychological anyhow, you know."

"My cough isn't," objected the girl. "Can I have some more cough medicine?"

"What do you think of this?" a student asked, holding up a black rag doll in a pair of purple slacks. "It's awful!" Ulla smiled as she said it.

"You're bitchy," retorted the girl, spitting at her. "I really think it's beautiful," Ulla corrected herself.

Neill denigrates intellectuality, but he has always praised creativity. Except for the highly conventional sewing, however, I saw no creative work of any sort at Summerhill.

No children's paintings adorn the bare walls: "If we had paintings on the dining-room walls," Neill explained, "the children would just throw food at them." But there were none in the other common rooms either.

No handicrafted articles were to be seen; a half-finished scarf lay on a loom in Ulla's room, but that was her own work.

"The children aren't interested in weaving." That universal creative outlet for country-dwelling Englishmen, gardening, was conspicuously neglected.

A couple of little boys attached themselves to me. "Can you play pingpong?" they asked. We trooped over to the games room, the open second floor above the locked workshop.

There were a dusty table, a tattered net, and one paddle, but a search of the shelves and floor, littered with chessmen, checkers, and miscellaneous paraphernalia, revealed no ball or second paddle.

The attempt to play ping-pong was abandoned, as was indeed the attempt to play any game requiring equipment.

Summerhill children are free from many restrictions other youngsters bear. It is not always clear what they are free for.

They proposed a trip to the big beech tree. On the path we encountered a youngster of about six playing with a slingshot. He dropped it and ran up to me.

"Will you hold my hand?" he begged. "Can I show you around?"

The beech-tree was magnificent, and a loop-ended rope hanging from one branch made a splendid swing.

Nearby an abandoned and overturned car was a playhouse, its one remaining wheel a merry-go round.

Dickie was still holding my hand when I said I had to go. "Can we go to the White Horse with you?"

"If you get permission."

"Ena will let us go."

The children hesitated at the gate of the Neill garden.

"You go ask," said the oldest, and when I refused to proceed alone she remained behind while the rest of us approached the back door.

A stocky woman in her forties, with rosy cheeks, straight black hair drawn into a bun, and no-nonsense look about her, answered our knock.

"Can we go to the White Horse with her?" "No!" The door was firmly closed.

Like a retiring Pied Piper I made my way to the main entrance. A car braked to a stop behind us. "What are you children doing down here?" demanded Ena Neill.

"You know you aren't allowed at this end of the grounds!" They scattered, I walked on, and Ena drove past me towards the town.

Later, Neill was asked by another visitor: "Your books say that the children make the rules, but did they make the rule that they can't leave the grounds without permission?"

"You have to consider the safety factor, after all," Neill demurred. Others who have visited Summerhill also report that he has not quite, as he claims, renounced "all discipline, all direction, all moral training." As headmaster he does issue certain prohibitions; he won't have liquor or drugs for example. Herb Snitzer transcribed Neill's words at one school meeting:

"Well, I'm going to tell you something. You have to choose whether you smoke here or not. If you're going to smoke here, you're not coming back. . . . Only the community can punish, but I can say, all right, if you don't want to live the Summerhill way, you're not coming back. . . . So don't feel you can come here, and do as you like. You can't."

With these exceptions or compromises, Summerhill children are free from coercion, physical or psychological — no canings, of course, but no encouragement either. The results are everywhere evident.

That common-room furniture is torn, pulled apart, ravaged, may be, as Neill insists, of no importance. When books are left out in the rain it doesn't really matter.

If boys throw knives at beautiful oak doors or a "happy, normal girl," as Neill describes her, burns holes with a red-hot poker in the walnut mantelpiece, the headmaster remains calm.

But the library is locked, the art room is locked, and the workshop is locked except when an instructor is present.

In earlier days it was kept open, but one boy used up all the letter-punches making cotter pins for his motorcycle, another broke bricks with the planishing hammer, a third ruined the lathe.

Children stopped attempting to make things, for as one of them said, "What's the good of going into the workshop? All the tools are rotten now."

Neill refurnished his shop and locked the door, but with a guilty conscience: was this Summerhillian?

Neill blames anti-social behavior on his "problem children."

"All our problem children are deprived children — children who haven't had their share of love. We're pulling other people's chestnuts out of the fire for them. I wish we didn't have to take anyone over 12. But that time they're spoiled by their conventional schools."

What is the role of a teacher in a school where the headmaster declares, "We do not consider that teaching very much matters"?

What, indeed, is the role of the school? In Neill's words, it should provide "an environment in which the emotions can be lived out and expressed."

Does Summerhill prove that "freedom works"? One way of evaluating this claim might be to follow the careers of its alumni.

Emmanual Bernstein recently published the results of his interview with 50 former Summerhillians living in the vicinity of London.

Some remembered the school with pleasure, others felt it had failed them. Many criticized its academic weakness.

Of the eleven who had become parents, three had sent their own children to Summerhill.

In spite of Neill's statement that his students "go into the arts," Bernstein could classify only six of the fifty as artists.

Summerhill's success should be evaluated in Neill's terms — individual happiness — rather than by achievement in college or distinction in careers.

Unfortunately, there is as yet no way of determining the happiness-quotient, and any estimate must be subjective.

The bonds-bursting exuberance I had expected at Summerhill was totally lacking; the homesickness of youngsters like Dickie only enhanced the general effect of dreariness.

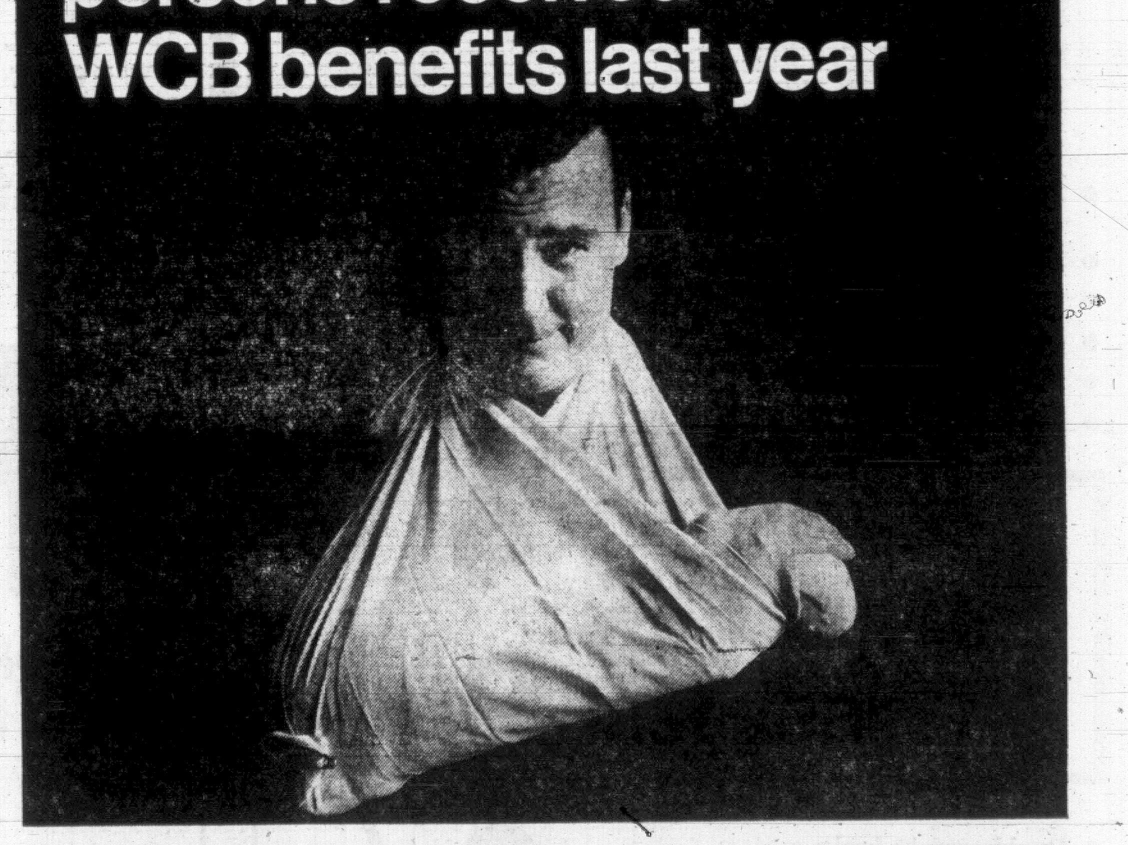
"Today is June 6, D-Day for Colonial Cookies Limited. With the "D" standing for double . . . For your new bakery plant . . . represents double the size and capacity of your old facilities, and you also aim to double your sales and staff . . . I know you'll reach those ambitious but realistic goals. In D-Day fashion, you've already proven you know how to successfully invade and capture foreign markets."

An outrageous parody of the tragic triumph of 25 years ago by a cynical iconoclast? The strained imagery of some mindless high school sophomore?

No. Just Ontario's Minister of Trade and Development, the Honorable Stanley J. Randall, as he opened the new bakery of Colonial Cookies Limited, Kitchener, at 5 p.m., June 6, 1969. On behalf of the Government elected by the people of Ontario.

More than 100,000 persons received WCB benefits last year



It's a fact that in 1968, more than 100,000 persons received benefits from the WCB. These people included temporarily and permanently injured workmen, and widows and children of fatally injured workmen. Compensation amounted to more than $32 million. If you are disabled by a work-caused injury, you get 75% of your earnings up to a maximum of $412.50 a month (tax free) and complete medical and rehabilitation services. If you are permanently disabled you can receive benefits for life . . . all this at no cost to you. B.C.'s labour force is protected by a compensation plan second to none on the North American continent—financed entirely by employers. The WCB always strives to be fair and impartial in the settling of claims and in performing its other duties. The WCB is glad to help.

Colony Meets Labor Threat

GIBRALTAR (Reuters)—Gibraltar, with the help of the British army and an influx of workers from Morocco, so far has successfully met the threat to its daily economic life caused by the withdrawal of its Spanish labor force.

Since midnight June 8, the last land link between Spain and Gibraltar has been sealed by the Spanish government. The measure—the harshest so far taken in Spain's campaign to recover the British rock colony of 25,000 people—stopped 4,630 Spanish workers from crossing from the Spanish border town of La Linea into Gibraltar every day.

As a result, the major part of the colony's labor force, including bakery workers, disappeared.

However, Gibraltar's supply of bread is being maintained. The British Army has made 12 soldiers available to help bake bread. They are among 40 servicemen now working fulltime with the civilian community.

Several hundred Moroccans, attracted by the chance of better pay, have been hired, but the present policy is not to rush into the recruiting of labor either from Morocco or Britain.

TAKE TWO JOBS

Many soldiers and a number of civilians are working part-time in the colony's labor force. Both the government and the city council allow employees to work evenings for private firms.

Hundreds of British students who offered their services for the summer vacations will be disappointed.

Some offers have been accepted. But most business firms said they preferred wherever possible to reassess their needs on a long-term basis and were more interested in permanent workers, from Morocco and Britain.

There is a growing awareness that it will not be necessary to replace the workers on a man-for-man basis.

Increasing mechanization, rationalization and standardization of methods and materials is expected to cut replacements by one-third or even one-half.

Employers note that although the workers now withdrawn were normally good, they had in recent years been increasingly under instructions from the politically motivated Spanish labor syndicates to adopt "go slow" tactics.

No new labor permits to work in Gibraltar were issued by Spanish authorities since 1954, when the Franco government took exception to Queen Elizabeth's visit to the Rock.

GETS EXPERT ADVICE

The building industry—one of those principally affected by the latest Spanish move—has had expert advice from the British ministry of public building and works.

Firms are considering pooling new labor-saving machinery, and even sharing the services of key technicians and tradesmen.

Shortage of accommodations, particularly for those from Britain who would want to bring families with them, is one of the problems.

Long-term planning envisages the building up of an independent Gibraltar industrial work force.

Meanwhile, tourism is booming and hotels report a 17-per-cent increase in business compared with last year.

Spain's latest move in the protracted dispute over Gibraltar followed publication of a new constitution under which the status of the colony would not be changed except with the consent of the local population.

It was announced last Friday that the first general election under the new constitution will be held July 30.

YOUTHS FOUND DEAD

NANAIMO — A youth and a girl missing since Saturday night were found asphyxiated Monday night in a car on a remote road in nearby Wellington.

They are Joanne Dalman, 16, of 1830 Dearborn Place, and Ken Cook, 21, of 640 Nicol.

Coroner J. M. Smart said carbon monoxide poisoning was suspected.

RCMP said the car was found at the end of Ross Road with the key on, gas tank empty and the battery dead. They said the vehicle had a poor exhaust system.

Post-mortems are to be held today. No decision on an inquest has been made.

Police said they felt the deaths were accidental.

Will Probe Charges

TORONTO (CP) — A hearing July 8 will probe charges by the Ontario Securities Commission that Victoria Wood Development Corp. Ltd., filed a false and misleading certificate in its prospectus when it offered $4,800,000 worth of shares for sale.

Charges were also laid against the parent company, Revenue Properties Co. Ltd., the brokerage house F. H. Deacon and Co. Ltd., of Toronto, the underwriters of the issue and six persons.

Trading in shares of Victoria Wood and Revenue Properties were halted Monday before the Toronto Stock Exchange opened. The American Stock Exchange suspended trading in the company April 18.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto, New York Rally

The Toronto market posted its sharpest decline on record Monday and its 15th loss in the last 16 trading sessions.

Today volume started at an active pace but slackened in later trading.

Both the Montreal and Canadian exchanges were closed today to mark St. Jean Baptiste Day in Quebec.

AT TORONTO in industrials, Investors Overseas rose 5¼ to 45½, Bow Valley 4 to 32, Home A 3¾ to 62¼, Home B 2½ to 57 and Cominco 1⅜ to 33¾.

Victoria Wood fell 6½ to 9, Anthes A 6½ to 34, Revenue 4½ to 5⅝ and Scott Paper 4 to 21.

Pine Point was up 1¾ to 39, Northgate ⅞ to 14⅝, and Patino ¾ to 28¾.

Dome Mines dropped 4¾ to 67, Placer 1 to 35 and Denison 1 to 34.

Western Decalta was up $1.80 to $9, Great Plains 1½ to 29½, Banff 1⅜ to 14½ and Central-Del Rio 1 to 14½.

AT NEW YORK trading was fairly active near the close.

Gains led losses by better than 450 issues.

Asamera Oil led the active issues on the American Stock Exchange, up 1¾ at 31⅜. Second most-active British petroleum gained ⅜.

AT LONDON the market extended Monday's rally, with British funds showing gains of up to ¼ point, reflecting the indications of a continuing credit squeeze contained in the government's letter of intent to the International Monetary Fund.

J. Lyons featured in equities with a rise in the ordinary share of 9s 3d to 84s 6d following news of its property revaluation. Elsewhere, gains of up to 2s were seen in Beecham, Dunlop and Courtaulds. Unilever was up 1s at 52s 3d.

The continuing weakness of oils was the main feature of a dull Canadian section. Dome Ex lost five points at 225, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas fell two points to 95, Syracuse dropped 2s 6d to 40s 3d and Triad eased ½ point to 11¼.

Trans-Canada Pipeline was three points off at 89¼, but Inco rose one point to 93. Nova Scotia was a weak spot in banks with a fall of 8s 9d to 191s 3d.

AT VANCOUVER the market held on to its firm tone in fairly quiet forenoon trading.

Buttle was up .55 to $5.80 and Alwin rose .30 to $2.40. Hearne, Omega and Venus each put on .15. Gains of .20 were made by Highmont and Silver Arrow.

Pacific Asbestos bucked the trend, losing .40 at $3.10. Integrated Wood lost .50 to $6.25 but Whonnock and EDP each climbed .50, to $16 and $9.50, respectively.

Western Realty, a new listing, traded 26,800 shares, settling at $6.62.

Calico Silver Mines has been suspended "pending clarification of the company's affairs." Neither Vancouver Stock Exchange nor Calico officials could be reached for comment.

Plywood Demand Off

The continued drop in plywood prices and lack of demand on the market has caused closure of Winchester Plywood Co. in Roseburg, Oregon, and a reduction at Publishers Paper Co. plywood mill in Portland.

Publishers said its Dwyer division mill would cut production in half and lay off 120 men by July 1. The company blamed "the present condition of the plywood market.

IBM Study Report

An International Business Machines study with implications for the Canadian computer industry will be ready for implementation in August.

IBM Canada Ltd. said the result will be changes in which it makes charges for services and products such as systems engineering, computer programs and customer education courses.

These will be offered in the U.S. for a charge, but an immediate 3 per cent reduction will be made on purchases of equipment and on equipment rentals effective Oct. 1.

General Tire

ROUTE of the new $1,200,000,000 natural gas pipeline, extending from the Briitsh Columbia-United States border to Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, is shown in drawing. The pipeline, 2,080 miles long, will tap natural gas in both Alaska and the Northwest Territories. (CP Wirephoto.)

Co-Operation Needed

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A need for stimulating exploration rather than a shortage of gas is the problem facing United States natural gas suppliers, W. Morton Jacobs, president of the American Gas Association, said Monday.

But regardless of future discoveries, the continent's appetite for natural gas is increasing at a rate which demands Canadian and U.S. co-operation in the development of reserves, Jacobs told delegates at the opening session of the three-day Canadian Gas Association conference.

Deliveries by Late 1973 Aim of Gas Pipeline Backers

VANCOUVER — Deliveries from the planned $1,200,000,000 natural gas pipeline from the Mackenzie River basin and Alaska to serve Canada and the U.S. could start in late 1973 if the current rate of discoveries is maintained and government authorization can be obtained.

Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. and Bechtel Corp. of San Francisco announced plans for the 2,080-mile line from the Prudhoe Bay area of Alaska to the Central-U.S. border Monday. (See map at left.)

The line, of 40- and 48-inch pipe, "will deliver gas reserves now being developed in the northern areas of Canada and Alaska to the growing markets of California and other parts of the western and mid-continental U.S., and at the same time will make gas supplies available, as required, for Canadian markets," the statement said.

It added that Mountain Pacific Pipeline Ltd., controlled by Westcoast and Bechtel, will own and operate the proposed line.

The announcement said construction is planned in two phases.

The first, costing $400,000,000, would see a 995-mile line of 40-inch pipe built from Kingsgate, B.C., north inside the B.C.-Alberta boundary to Fort Liard, NWT.

It would have an initial throughput of 800,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

In the second, the line would be extended more than 1,000 miles north to the Mackenzie delta and along the north slope of Alaska to the Prudhoe Bay area.

This line would be 48 inches in diameter and the throughput capacity of the entire line would be stepped up to 1,650,000,000 cubic feet daily.

Later this would be increased by additional compressors to 2,500,000,000 cubic feet.

The second phase would be built within five years of completing the first, the announcement said.

"In the course of the recent intensified oil exploration boom in the Prudhoe Bay are, several significant gas discoveries have been made and it is considered likely that substantial reserves will be proved in this area during the next few years.

"The same expectations are held for the Mackenzie delta area which has geologic conditions similar to those prevailing at Prudhoe Bay."

Recent studies show that a ready market exists in the U.S., especially California, the statement said.

Markets in eastern Canada could also be supplied with additional quantities of gas from the proposed pipeline.

Two other pipeline companies have expressed interest in developing the gas reserves being uncovered in the northwest.

Last spring Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha proposed building two lines to move natural gas from northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories to its markets in the middle west of the U.S.

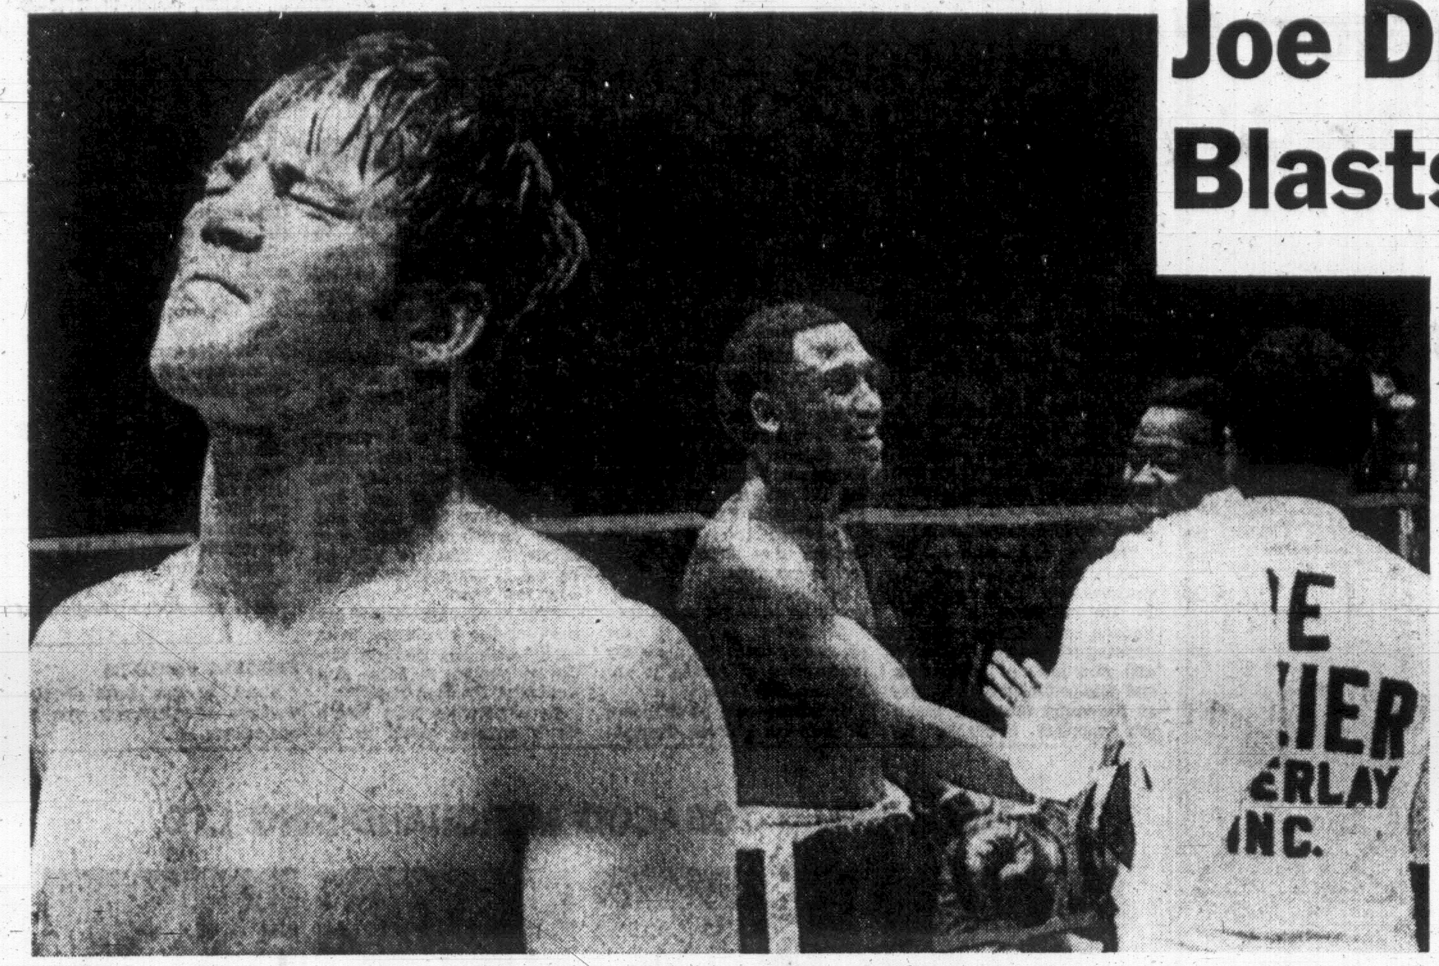
Joe Drops Best Bombs; Blasts Jerry in Seven



BOTH SIDES OF STORY

While Jerry Quarry registers combination of pain and disappointment, Joe Frazier reflects joy of victory as he accepts congratulations after heavyweight title bout at Madison Square Garden in New York. Fight was stopped in seventh round Monday night as cut under Quarry's right eye gave Frazier TKO triumph. It was 24th straight win for Frazier. (AP Wirephoto.)

Jimmy Ellis Gets into Act; Swaps Shouts With Frazier

By JIMMY MEILLEUR

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe Frazier dangled his piece of the heavyweight title before a challenger for the fourth time Monday night and when it was over Irish Jerry Quarry was badly cut and finished after seven rounds.

Quarry lost on a technical knockout because of an eight-stitch gash under his right eye. He was a 12-to-5 underdog.

Promoters now are dreaming of a September bout between Frazier and Jimmy Ellis, the other heavyweight claimant.

At $100 tops, a crowd of 16,570 paid $502,518 at Madison Square Garden for Monday night's bout.

A match that would produce the undisputed division ruler would probably gross twice that sum, but it would have to be held in a ballpark.

Also in the background is Cassius Clay, the champion who lost his title outside the ring because of his conviction as a draft dodger. He was sentenced to five years in prison, but is out of jail pending an appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Clay, if his sentence is overturned by the high court, would be in the thick of the heavyweight sweepstakes with a claim that he was unlawfully deprived of his title by world boxing authorities.

There were no knockdowns in the rugged battle between Frazier and Quarry.

They came out throwing bombs, and after three rounds there wasn't much to choose between them. Then Frazier, blasting away with grim effectiveness, took it all.

None of the ring officials' scorecards saw it very close, however. One official put Frazier ahead 6-1 in rounds.

The ring physician stopped the 15-round fight at the end of the seventh round although Quarry later said he could have gone another round or two.

Frazier Cautious After Opening Cut

"If I had it to do all over again, I wouldn't change a thing," a tearful Quarry said after his lambasting. "I was in there against a helluva fighter."

"I had blurred vision from the third round on," he told reporters in the dressing room. "I had too many complaints in the past about my style of fighting. I came out banging and lost. I didn't hurt my hands or anything like that but I just had too much fighter in there with me.

"I couldn't see out of my right eye. But I still had a bit of vision in my left eye and I begged the doctor to give me one more shot."

Obviously disappointed at losing on a knockout because of cuts, the broad-shouldered challenger said if he had to lose he would rather have gone out "on my back."

Frazier, a 25-year-old Negro with tremendous legs, said Quarry set too fast a pace, and he couldn't keep it up. Joe said he knew he had the Irishman in trouble as early as the third round.

CAME OUT SMOKING

"Quarry came out smoking real hard, but I could see I had him in trouble in the third," the relaxed champion said. "So I just took my time—no use blowing that unnecessary smoke.

"Jerry is a terrific puncher and when he landed in those early rounds I knew I had been hit. . . . I knew I had to be careful. . . . In the first two rounds, I could see he was starting his punches from the hip, so stayed close and kept under his rights and left.

"When I opened a cut under his right eye in the second round I decided to be cautious. I just took my shots because I knew he was game and always dangerous. I stayed right on top of him and just kept plugging."

Frazier's buzz-saw attack didn't scare Ellis.

Called into the ring for a television interview, he soon was engaged in a shouting battle with Frazier.

Yank Durham, Frazier's manager and trainer, told Ellis: "We're going to take a tune-up with you and then fight Cassius Clay if the government ever turns him loose."

"I'd like to make Ellis and Frazier right now for September," said Teddy Brenner, the Garden's matchmaker.

Frazier is recognized as champion in six states in the U.S. and in Mexico and Argentina. Ellis is recognized by the World Boxing Association as champion.

Frazier's destruction of Quarry, 24, from Bellflower, Calif., was his 24th win in as many pro fights and his 22nd knockout.

With closed circuit television and other receipts included, Frazier, a Philadelphian, earned about $350,000 and Quarry around $250,000.

Player 'Fair' After Fan Uses Lumber

Halfback Winston Earle, 24, of Syracuse Scorpions was taken unconscious to hospital Sunday night after the Scorpions' 3-0 loss to Philadelphia Spartans in an American Soccer League game.

Witnesses said Earle and several team-mates rushed to help two groundkeepers when the latter were attacked by spectators.

One of the fans, the witnesses said, swung what looked like a piece of lumber and hit Earle on the head.

Boxer Goes To Hospital

The boxer from Norfolk, Va., was knocked out in the second round by Jack Bodell, the No. 1 contender for the vacant British heavyweight title.

A medical spokesman for the British Boxing Board of Control said:

"Jordan is being sent to hospital as a precaution."

LEOS SEND THREE HOME AFTER MEDICAL EXAMS

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia Lions cut three players from their Canadian Football League team Monday and sent another to hospital for a checkup.

Linebacker Jiggy Smaha, tackle Jim Vest and defenceback John Cybruch failed to pass the medical check and were cut. Smaha, a 235-pounder who joined Lions last year from the University of Georgia, and Cybruck, from University, of Oregon, were reported to have back problems. Vest, formerly with Washington State University, was reported to have a bad knee.

Veteran defensive-end Dick Fouts, starting his 13th season in the CFL, pulled up during a light workout and was sent to hospital for x-ray examination.

Combos Jam Spot Behind Leaders

CFB Combos shouldered into an already crowded situation near the top of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League by blanking Hall Rams 2-0 Monday at Heywood Avenue Park.

Bob Harris hurled a three-hitter to lift Combos into a tie with Lake Cowichan and Colwood Inn, one-half game behind leading Denford Electric.

Harris struck out three batters and never allowed a walk while going the distance.

Harris also aided his own cause at the plate, scoring Barry Granger with a single in the first inning. Granger led batting for Combos with a two-for-three record, including a double.

Jake Latham singled in Jack White, who had walked, with the insurance run in the fourth.

Tom Morris Shatters Record In 100-Mile Bicycle Triumph

One second was all that separated the first and second-place finishers Sunday in the 10th annual Gary Lund Memorial bicycle race from Qualicum to Portage Inlet along the Island Highway.

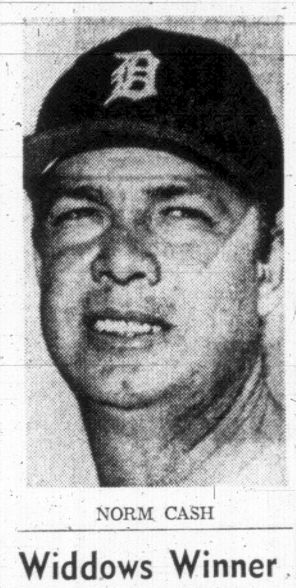
Victoria's Tom Morris flashed through the 100-mile distance with a time of 4 hours, 9 minutes and 20 seconds to break a 1963 mark set by Jack Ferguson, of Vancouver.

A mere second behind was Vancouver's Roger Sumner.

Bill Wild, a former Victorian now racing out of Vancouver, placed third in 4:18.30.

Morris and Sumner are both expected to head for Calgary this weekend to participate in the three-day Cascade Builders' Tour race.

Cash-and-Price Parlay Too Much for Yankees



NORM CASH

By The Associated Press

It might have looked like a big gamble, but Mayo Smith's parlay of Cash and Price paid off for Detroit Tigers.

That's Norm Cash and Jim Price, and they were responsible for the Tigers' 6-5 victory over New York Yankees Monday night.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Washington Senators 5-3 and California Angels beat Minnesota Twins 5-2. Cleveland at Baltimore and Chicago at Seattle were rained out.

Cash figured in the Tigers' first four runs. In the first inning, his single sent Dick McAuliffe to third and McAuliffe scored on Willie Horton's single.

In the third, Cash drove a fly to deep centre, enabling Tom Tresh to go to third and come home on Stan Bahnsen's wild pitch.

In the fifth, Cash singled home Al Kaline. In the seventh, his single moved Kaline to third from where he scored on another Horton single.

Still, the Tigers trailed 5-4 going into the ninth. Left-hander Steve Hamilton got the first out, but Kaline raced all the way to third when third baseman Bob Cox threw wild on his grounder.

Change of Scenery Aids Dodger Duo

The Yankees had led all the way until then, having taken a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning on Joe Pepitone's run-scoring single and a two-run, bases-loaded single by Bill Robinson.

Baltimore also used the home run to beat Washington and Darold Knowles. Frank Robinson broke a 2-2 tie with his 15th homer in the eighth inning, and Dave Johnson hit a two-run shot later in the inning.

Knowles, who hadn't allowed an earned run since returning from military service last month, gave up all five Oriole runs.

The change of scenery to Los Angeles from Montreal has worked wonders for Maury Wills and Manny Mota—and for the revitalized Dodgers.

Mota and Wills, acquired by the Dodgers two weeks ago in a trade between the two National League clubs, have led the Dodgers' charge to top spot in the Western Division with nine wins in 13 starts.

Mota hit his first home run of the season Monday and singled to drive in three runs as the Dodgers defeated Atlanta Braves 5-3 for their seventh straight win.

Wills contributed a single and a triple.

Elsewhere in the NL Monday, Chicago Cubs struck for two runs in the ninth inning and edged Pittsburgh Pirates 5-4 for a five-game Eastern Division lead over idle New York Mets. Cincinnati Reds blanked San Diego Padres 5-0 on Jim Merritt's two-hitter and Houston Astros ran their winning streak to seven with a 9-3 victory over San Francisco Giants. St. Louis Cardinals and Montreal were rained out.

Wills, 36, a shortstop who stole 104 bases for the Dodgers seven years ago and led them to three pennants before being dealt to Pittsburgh in 1967, has hit .380 since rejoining his old mates June 11.

He has hit safely in each of the last 10 games.

Mota, 31, has been even hotter at the plate since becoming a Dodger. He has hit .425, boosting his season average to .353.

Widdows Winner Of Monza Prix

MONZA, Italy (Reuters) — Robin Widdows of Britain drove a Brabham to victory in the Monza Formula two Grand Prix car race here Sunday.

Second was another Briton, Peter Westbury, in a Brabham BY-30. Francois Cevert of France was third in an Italian Tecno.

Stewardson Selected To Head Curling Club

Ken Sturrock, Kirby Moysey and Barry Harvey were elected to the board of directors for two-year terms while Ada Fuller and Abe Libby were elected for one-year terms.

After a policy of not accepting new members for several years, the members present decided to allow newcomers to enter the club. Membership fee was set at $150.

The financial report indicated the largest surplus since the formation of the club, with an operating profit of $17,833.64 and a net profit, after bond interest, depreciation and bank charges, of $13,736.30.

Gary Hits New High In Pro Golf Earnings

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Player established a personal year's high by increasing his Professional Golfer's Association tour earnings to $89,006 with a third-place finish in the Kemper Open that ended Sunday.

Player won $8,850 in the Kemper.

Gene Littler, who did not compete in the Kemper, continued to lead the earnings list with $102,138 as Player moved into second place. Lee Trevino is third with $85,329 and Billy Casper fourth $79,254.

Rounding up the 10 leading money winners are Dale Douglass, $78,617; Miller Barber, $75,361; George Archer, $74,750; Dave Hill, $73,725; Bruce Devlin, $69,841; and Orville Moody, $68,6111.

ONE-DAY GATE RECORD FOR AMERICAN LEAGUE

BOSTON (AP) — American League baseball games at six sites last Sunday drew a total of 199,807 fans, breaking a single-day attendance record which has stood for more than 30 years.

The breakdown was Washington at Detroit, two games, 52,721; Baltimore at Cleveland, two, 52,189; Minnesota at Oakland, 31,715; New York at Boston, 29,901; Chicago at California, 26,273, and Kansas City at Seattle, 7,008.

The previous record of 195,544 was set on May 30, 1938, when there were only eight teams in the league and thus only four game sites. The lion's share of that turnout was the 81,841 who attended a Boston-New York doubleheader—the largest crowd in Yankee Stadium history.

Carls Used Eleven To Humble Rocks

Victoria Shamrocks may hit upon the right combination of circumstances Wednesday night to crack an "11" jinx, as Vancouver Carlings visit for Western Lacrosse Association confrontation in Memorial Arena.

Rocks, looking for a win after nine league starts, have faced Vancouver three times this season—with Carls slipping by with 11 goals each game.

Vancouver downed the Victoria crew 11-10 on May 20, 11-10 on June 7 and 11-9 on June 10.

Coach Tom Druce thinks that this "might be the one we win."

Rocks will be in top shape with only one player on the injured list. Franky Alexander is a doubtful starter after collecting shoulder damage in last Wednesday's game against Coquitlam Adanacs.

Some Rocks will be facing Vancouver with thinner wallets.

Commissioner Tom English assessed fines against five Victoria and Coquitlam players as well as both clubs for the game-ending fracas at Coquitlam on Saturday.

Each club was fined $75 for failing to control its players after the game had to be called in the third period with Adanacs leading 17-5.

GATES HIT HARD

Vern and Tom Black of Rocks were each out $25 as were Coquitlam's Bill Bradley and Harry Wooley.

Hardest hit was league-leading scorer Mike Gates of Adanacs, who was fined $35 and suspended for the next meeting of the clubs in Victoria on July 9.

English called the stiff penalty for what he termed a deliberate attempt to injure another player.

Gates can easily afford to miss a game, however, with an 11-point lead in the individual scoring race over New Wpestminster Salmonbellies' Paul Parnell, who has 36.

Gates also leads in both goals (19) and assists (28).

DEFAULT PADS VICTORY SKEIN

Bate Construction captured its 12th successive win in the Major Men's Softball League the easy way Monday.

Bates collected the victory by default when Red Lion Inn couldn't field a team at Central Park. Three Lions were down with the 'flu and one was on the injured list.

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Conduct always has been considered by the selectors who decide the makeup of British Columbia's Willingdon Cup team, and wisely so.

Bad actors generally create an impression that everybody from the neighborhood behaves in the same boorish manner.

Delightfully refreshing is a forthright statement from B.C.G.A. representative Ernie Brown that the provincial body "reserves the right to not include a person or persons that may NOT be a credit to B.C."

If that's how they do it, then that is how they should say it. They didn't say it loud enough in the past, and this year's declaration would indicate the BCGA is more adult than some of us seem to think.

Selection of the provincial team will be finalized July 5-6 after a special, 36-hole series at Royal Colwood and Victoria Golf Club.

Only about 12 to 16 golfers will be invited to the final trial test.

Invitations will go out only to players who have competed in their zone tournament (the Victoria City Amateur, in our case) and the B.C. Amateur.

City titleholder Laurie Kerr has one of Victoria's two invitations locked up. A second invitation will be tendered after a playoff today between Gorge Vale's Dave Mick and Carl Schwantje of Oak Bay.

An engineering golfer in Massachusetts whiled away the long, dark winter evenings by developing a portable gizmo for measuring (with true engineering accuracy) the diameter, roundness and muzzle velocity of a golf ball.

It's perfected now. Trouble is, the inventive golfer doesn't know what to do with it, and is wondering why every golf professional shouldn't have one ... so the pro can test out every ball before he (a) sells it, or (b) puts it in play.

PGA publicist Bud Harvey suggests it was designed for a non-existant market. But you will be fascinated to share in the engineer's discovery that the peak compressive force at impact is 2.750 pounds. And you will delight in knowing that the maximum ball deflection under this load is .466 inches, and this takes place .0003 seconds after impact when the clubhead has traveled .60 inches from the initial point of contact. Finally, the whole sorry business of putting the ball into flight requires just .0007 seconds, during which the clubhead travels 1.12 inches.

In other words, it takes you five hours to play a round of golf, but only .007 seconds to spoil your whole day!

Nanaimo Winner

NANAIMO — Vancouver's Jack Munroe carded 121 for 27 holes at the Nanaimo Golf Club over the weekend to win the fifth annual provincial Associated Canadian Travellers' tournament.

Chuck Freeman of Nanaimo and Fred Switzer of Victoria fired 123 and 126, respectively, to place second and third in the low-gross contest.

Victoria brothers Len and Larry Duval finished one-two in the low-net category.

Bombers Capture Layritz Playoff

Ray Krueger stroked a two-run double in the final inning Sunday to give Boosters a 2-1 baseball triumph over Bombers in a battle for the Layritz Little League playoff championship.

Dave McNaughton pitched Boosters to the title victory.

In earlier action, 59ers added the Layritz minor league playoff trophy to their league title by defeating Orioles 7-1.

New Tennis Group Aims To Aid Lesser Players

WIMBLEDON (CP)—The newly-formed International Tennis Players' Association will hold a special meeting Sunday to discuss the tennis situation in racially-segregated South Africa.

South Africa refuses to permit whites and blacks to play in the same tournament. Poland and Czechoslovakia withdrew from scheduled Davis Cup matches with South Africa this year to protest the racial separation policy.

"There are a lot of ramifications to the problem, and we felt that we should hold a special meeting to discuss it," said American Arthur Ashe, a Negro and the group's treasurer.

He made his comment at a news conference Monday as rain washed out the first day's play at the 1969 All-England lawn tennis championships.

Chairman John Newcombe, Australia's 1967 Wimbledon champion, said the association, formed last week, has 52 paid-up members. They include players from Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Romania.

HEWITT PRESENT

Among South African members are Bob Hewitt, Cliff Drysdale and Ray Moore.

Charlie Pasarell, U.S. Davis Cup player and vice-chairman of the association, said one aim is to protect the lesser players on the tennis circuit rather than the big professional names whose own promoters take care of their interests.

Ashe, outlining the decisions made so far by the association, said it wants all members to receive conditions for participating in writing from tournament organizers.

Should a player fail to fulfil his side of an agreement, he might be fined or suspended from membership by the association.

The rain Monday forced a one-day delay in the efforts of Rod Laver of Australia to win the third jewel in the grand slam of tennis for the fourth time.

Gorge Vale to Open Playoff at Meadows

First round of the Victoria Inter-Club Golf League playoffs, a home-and-home series, will be played Wednesday.

All six league teams participate in the playoffs, but the spotlight will focus on Gorge Vale and Glen Meadows—finalists in the Willie Park Driver competition.

Gorge Vale's eight-man team will visit Glen Meadows. The final and deciding round will be played July 2 at Gorge Vale.

At the same time, Colwood and Uplands will play a similar series for third place while Victoria and Cedar Hill meet to decide fifth place.

GORGE AT GLEN MEADOWS

L. Carroll and C. Ferguson vs. H. Jacobson and B. Sluggett.
M. Kolb and G. Jones vs. D. Norbury and W. Hodson.
A. MacLeod and D. Mick vs. R. Silverberg and B. Brooks.

Read why the Shell New-Home Comfort Rating can guarantee better heating at reduced costs.

Moving to a new home? Get in touch with your Shell Heating Branch. A New-Home Comfort Rating costs you absolutely nothing and involves no obligation.

Qualified heating analysts will Comfort-Rate your new home. Tell you what you can expect from your present heating equipment. How much you can expect to pay in heating bills. How much you should be paying.

Most important, Shell experts can answer the 10 vital questions posed above. The improvements they suggest can bring you more home comfort and lower heating bills. (Many of the suggested improvements involve only minor repairs or adjustments.)

Free savings-comparison

Choosing new heating equipment can be complicated. Unlike choosing a car, for example: Heating equipment doesn't look pretty, has no record on the racing circuit. And the business is full of jargon, like FPM and BTU and Max/Min bonnet temp.

Shell experts will untangle the jargon and show you in dollars and cents which size model you need.

And we compare your cost of heating with each type of fuel. We show which fuel gives the most heat for your dollar. We guarantee it will be a fair comparison. If your present system is adequate we will tell you. (Photo below: A free test. Shell technician checks burner is correctly adjusted)

No deposit, years to pay

If the savings-comparison indicates Shell oil-powered equipment gives the greatest savings, we can install it promptly. There is no deposit to make, and you can take up to 10 years to pay.

You are billed on the monthly heating oil statement. There are no special cheques to write.

Labor, Building Groups Support Girls' Hostel

Amalgamated Construction Association and the Victoria Trades and Labor Council have swung their full support behind the Victoria Hostel for Girls.

Ed Phillips, executive director of ACA in Victoria, said this morning that his regional committee had decided to follow the lead of the plumbing and heating industry and donate time and materials to completely renovate the 1423 Fernwood house scheduled to open later this year as a home for homeless girls.

Phillips and contractor Pat Paine were appointed co-ordinators of the work for ACA. They will work in close conjunction with Tom Wheatley, business agent of Local 324 of the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union, and Alex Rawlings, chairman of the plumbing and heating industry trade promotion fund.

Over-all chairman of the project is Michael J. Griffin, but Paine will play the role of prime contractor when renovation work begins this Thursday.

HOME FOR JOBLESS

Originally scheduled to open July 1, the hostel, which will house homeless and jobless girls for up to three-month periods, appeared heading for serious delays through lack of funds to carry out essential repairs.

The Canadian Plumbing and Mechanical Contractors Association was the first to move, offering skilled technicians and all materials necessary to bring plumbing and heating up to scratch.

Business agent Wheatley said his first request for union support brought six volunteers forward, more than enough to complete the task.

Management volunteered to supply all materials and tools necessary.

Two weeks later Griffin, who serves on both CPMCA and ACA directorates, asked regional directors of ACA if they would like to participate in the renovation work.

The decision was unanimous.

Paine, Phillips, Wheatley and architect John Di Castri formed a technical team to inspect the older home and plan the renovations.

'WORKING ON SHOESTRING'

"I wasn't too optimistic about the whole thing—until the technical team went through the house," Di Castri said. "I knew the girls were working on a shoestring with little money to do what they would like to do.

"The contractors and the plumbers went through the house and more or less told me off for skimping in certain areas. It was obvious that they want the hostel to have more than just a lick of paint and a few minor repairs."

Paddy Di Castri, who has been spokesman for the group of women since they started to raise funds for the project 18 months ago, had to have time to compose herself when informed of the ACA move.

"I just can't believe it," she said. "One day we are wondering just how we can raise more money to get the hostel open, the next we are confronted with all these wonderful people who say 'move over, we've got work to do'."

MEET BRINGS SPLIT

Radical Group Bogging Down?

By ERIC WENTWORTH
The Washington Post

CHICAGO — A hectic, at time tumultuous five-day national convention here has spawned two rival groups each claiming the name of "Students for a Democratic Society."

Two sets of "national officers, selected Sunday evening after lengthy caucusing, staged separate press conferences Monday to assert their rights to the "SDS" label. Each had unkind words for the other.

Laborites Expelled

The so-called "regulars" announced they had expelled their Progressive Labor Party (PLP) foes from SDS for "objectively racist and counter-revolutionary positions and actions." They said the Progressive Laborites and their followers have "sabotaged and attacked the real struggles of the people of the world."

The PLP-dominated group retorted that the regulars were a minority and had split away "in a fallacious attempt to cover up defeat." They called the regulars tactic "a service only to imperialism" and "reactionary because it is unprincipled."

As though to underscore their conflicting claims, each group called its press conference for noon.

The impact of this sibling schism, beyond the obvious confusion it sows, can be read at least two ways. Some observers believe the radical movement is bogging down in internal power and policy struggles that will sap its energies and slow its momentum.

Intense Drive

To skeptics, the estimated 1500 young radicals who gathered here from all parts of the country seemed hopelessly addicted to mutual suspicion and ideological nit-picking. Although both groups are equally committed to waging "revolution," the regulars tend to see young people and ethinic groups waging parallel struggles for liberation while PLP stresses a single working-class struggle.

On the other hand, most political conventions fall victim to divisive tendencies. Back on home turf in the months ahead, each SDS faction's drive to "radicalize" American students, workers and ghetto dwellers under its own banner will almost certainly prove intense.

From this latter reading, there is surely little cause for police chiefs, university presidents and other heads of the establishment to breathe easier. The "regulars", for example, announced plans for "raising the militancy" of the anti-Vietnam war movement including "massive demonstrations" here this fall.

Just how long both groups can continue claiming to be the true "SDS" remains unclear. Numerically, there appeared to be at least 500 delegates in each camp during Sunday's caucusing which as usual was closed to the press.

Makes Appeal

Jeff Jones, newly-elected inter-organizational secretary for the regulars, conceded there will be local and regional conflicts over SDS identity. But, he added, "we are confident it will be clear by the end of the summer who is SDS and what are the politics of SDS."

Patricia Forman, Jones' counterpart with the PLP-led group, vowed at her press conference that "the attempt to split the student movement will be and is being fought." She appeled to "regulars" to return to the fold.

As things stood Monday, the "regulars"—whose new top officer is Mark Rudd, who gained fame in the Columbia University uprising last year—controlled the steel-doored SDS national office on West Madison Street with its files, funds and mailing lists.

To a question whether the "regulars" would take legal or other action to bar their rivals from calling themselves "SDS," outgoing national secretary Michael Klonsky replied, "We don't know yet." But asked after the press conference, if he feared the PL-led forces would seek to take the national office by force, Klonsky snapped, "If the Chicago 'pigs' can't get in, the PL 'pigs' can't."

Walkout Staged

The power struggle betweeen the two factions was evident from the moment the convention began in the Old Coliseum south of Chicago's "Loop." It had been building up, in numerous local chapters and prior national gatherings, for many months.

It soon became clear last week to those subsequently nicknamed the "regulars" that PL and its campus arm, the Worker-Student Alliance, had the strength to dominate the meeting's policy votes and officer elections.

The "regulars" staged a walkout to an adjacent Coliseum meeting hall Friday night, where after exhaustive caucusing they voted about 24 hours later to purge the PLP members.

Rudd, the new "regular" national secretary, has arrested in May on a charge of possessing marjuana when he was entering the United States from Canada—a charge the 22-year-old firebrand said Monday was a "total plant." Aside from Rudd and Jones, the "regulars" also named 24-year-old William Ayers as their educational secretary.

The rival group's new officers include John Pennington as national secretary and Alan Spector as educational secretary in addition to Miss Forman. The PLP faction left the Coliseum Sunday night singing "Solidarity Forever."

19-Gun Salute Soldier's Last

WINDSOR, England (AP) — A 19-gun salute thundered over the battlements of Windsor Castle today as Britain bade farewell to one of her greatest soldiers, Field Marshal Earl Alexander of Tunis, former governor-general of Canada.

The body of the 77-year-old wartime commander was carried to the castle on a gun carriage pulled by seven black horses. Troops lined the route, and many of Alexander's war veterans wept in the somber crowds.

The field marshal, who died June 16 of a ruptured main artery, rescued Britain's soldiers from two of their most resounding defeats in the last war and led the Allies to some of their noblest victories.

Behind Alexander's coffin, draped with the Union Jack and the old soldier's plumed hat and sword, marched the pall bearers — former prime minister Harold Macmillan, Admiral of the Fleet Lord Mountbatten, American Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, RAF Marshals Sir Charles Elsworthy and Lord Portal, and Field Marshal Lord Harding.

Followed by a chestnut horse with riding boots reversed in the stirrups, Alexander's body was carried to St. George's Chapel, Queen Elizabeth's personal church inside the castle 40 miles from London.

Members of the RCMP stood guard on the chapel steps, a tribute from the country where Alexander was governor-general from 1946 to 1952.

Detachments of the King's Troop, Royal Horse Artillery, and the plume-helmeted Household Cavalry, the Queen's personal guardians, formed the procession with soldiers from regiments that served under Alexander during the war.

Macmillan, 75, visibly trembled after the church service, becoming so weak that a chair had to be brought out to the front of the chapel, where the former premier and the other pallbearers watched the coffin borne away.

It was taken by motor hearse for burial in a family vault in St. Albans, Hertfordshire, about 20 miles northwest of London.

Accompanying the hearse on this last journey were Alexander's wife, Lady Alexander, and their four children.

The Dean of Windsor, Very Rev. Robert Woods, recalled Alexander's service in Canada with a special prayer of thanks for all Alexander had done in war and peace.

Among those who attended the service were former prime minister Lester B. Pearson and Gen. Jean Allard, chief of Canada's defence staff.

Also at the service was Lord Thomson, who said later it was "an extremely sad occasion."

Troop Cut Reactions Mixed

Times News Services

OTTAWA—The announced reduction in Canada's armed forces made Monday by Defence Minister Leo Cadieux has drawn mixed reactions from opposition parties in the House of Commons.

Both the NDP and the Creditiste factions have indicated support of the Liberal administration move but Conservatives have soundly denounced it.

The cut will reduce Canada's armed forces strength from the present 98,000, a post-Korea low, to between 80,000 and 85,000 by early 1973.

Mr. Cadieux prefaced his statement with a warning that many variables must be taken into account before final decisions are made, and noted that Canada's role in NATO still is being worked out.

Mr. Cadieux said a careful analysis had been conducted to determine the resources required to meet the defence priorities spelled out in Prime Minister Trudeau's statement of April 3, in which it was announced that Canada intends to reduce its forces in Europe by an unspecified amount.

The priorities set by Mr. Trudeau at that time were defence of Canada's sovereignty, continental defence, NATO and United Nations peacekeeping.

"Although there are some detailed alternatives still to be decided, we have concluded that a regular force of 80,000 to 85,000 will be needed to meet Canada's defence requirements," said Mr. Cadieux.

NO 'FORCED ATTRITION'

It was hoped to reach the new manpower levels without "forced attrition." Outside the House, Mr. Cadieux said recruitment would be limited and he expected the attrition rate will increase slightly during the next few years.

Attrition means turnover due to retirements and resignations.

The defence minister made clear in his statement to the House that the services will still need a flow of new personnel.

"Although we will be reducing our over-all regular force strength, we will continue to recruit qualified young Canadians to whom we can promise an attractive and challenging career."

The reserve forces, at present numbering about 26,750, also will be cut, while the present cadet-training program—involving about 100,000 cadets—will be maintained.

The number of civilians employed by the department will be reduced.

Dealing with individual branches of the armed forces, the defence minister said Maritime Command's anti-submarine role will be maintained, but at the same time more emphasis will be placed on guarding Canada's territorial waters.

"In this context our Arctic territories take on particular significance."

The projected 1973 force level will be the lowest since 1952, when the Korean War buildup was getting into high gear.

The strength of the services at March 31 that year was 95,000. The post Second-World-War high came in 1962 when the forces numbered 126,474. Since then their strength has steadily declined.

During the Second World War —in 1944—the armed forces reached a peak strength of 787,475. The postwar low came in 1948 when service strength dipped to 34,762.

J. Angus MacLean (Malpeque), the Conservative defence critic, denounced the planned future reduction as unfortunate both because of the impression it might create among Canada's allies and because of the impression it might create among Canada's enemies.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) endorsed the reduction plan and suggested Mr. Cadieux concentrate on cuts at defence headquarters in Ottawa so there will be "more Indians and not so many chiefs."

Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) congratulated the minister and said the defence statement had the full support of the Creditiste party.

Mr. Cadieux told Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) that Maritime Command's anti-submarine role is being discussed with NATO, and its exact nature won't be known until the talks are completed.

He told Mr. MacLean he didn't think any Maritimes bases are scheduled for closing, but this involved a question of definition.

Phones for Computers

LONDON (Reuters)—The British post office today began a "midnight line" phone service for insomniacs and computers. Users will get unlimited service for a standing charge of £200 a year if calls are made between midnight and 6 a.m. The post office says the service is most likely to be used to data transmissions—computers talking to computers.

Tougher Controls on Universities Warned

Failure of university administrators to head off confrontations by racial students could result in more government controls on universities, Esquimalt - Saanich MP David Anderson said Monday.

The Liberal MP's warning came during off-the-cuff remarks following his speech to 100 delegates attending a symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society, sponsored by the University of Victoria.

He said the public does occasionally demand a scapegoat and sometimes asks the government to impose controls.

"We do not want to meddle in this area, but we may well be forced to by public pressure.

"I rather fear that in the future the government will be involved more and more, and will, from your point of view, be interfering more and more."

Anderson said government control could come in the form of line-by-line analysis of university budgets. Universities now project their estimated costs, present them to the provincial governments for approval, and the governments grant the universities what they deem to be a fair share of available funds.

Anderson said one area where the government might attempt to cut back expenditure is in university housing, which from the government's point of view is inefficient because university residences are occupied only seven months out of 12.

"That money would be better spent in low-cost housing at Rose-Blanshard, where people will be living 12 months of the year."

Anderson, a former Victoria College student, said the universtites must cease competing among themselves for government grants, and form co-ordinated committees to speak with one voice to the government.

FLAMING WRECKAGE of a DC-4 cargo plane cut a swath through a business section of Miami late Monday damaging eight. Firemen hours later were still fighting small fires and sifting through debris for more bodies. Above they pour foam and water on a wing and engine section of the aircraft. (AP Wirephoto.)

Ten Killed in Miami Plane Crash

Ten persons were killed. One building was destroyed, eight damaged. Flames and flying debris destroyed or damaged 42 cars and trucks.

A police spokesman estimated the over-all property loss at about $1,000,000.

The known dead included the plane's four crew members and six persons on the ground. Another 12 were injured.

Hours after the crash, a half mile northeast of Miami International Airport, rescue workers sifted the smouldering wreckage and rubble for more bodies.

"We're sure there will be more," said Police Lieut. James Reese.

A Red Cross worker said he believed there were at least two more bodies in the debris.

The Dominicana Air Lines craft was attempting to circle back to the airport from which it had just departed. One of its four engines was out and a second was smoking.

A wing struck the corner of an apartment building, bumped the second storey of a medical centre, skipped over a bakery, plowed a furrow in the roof of the next building, took the corner off an auto transmission shop, knocked over the pumps of a gasoline station, and slammed burning into Charles Knapp's auto body shop, killing four persons there.

Pieces of the plane and debris from the buildings flew forward. One engine destroyed a car 20 yards down busy 36th Street. Other pieces sailed 50 to 100 yards farther.

The plane spewed burning fuel from its own tanks and more flaming gasoline poured from the ruptured service station pumps. It took firemen half an hour to bring the fires under control.

Two persons were killed in the street.

SAW SURVIVOR EMERGE

Edward Burmester had just left the Knapp shop and was in his back yard about 40 feet from the rear of the building when the plane hit.

He ran to the front of the shop where he said he saw Knapp stagggering near the wreckage.

Burmester said Knapp asked: "Am I the only one to get out? Have you seen my boys? Have you seen my boys?"

Knapp's sons Clyde, 17, and Clifford, 15, were among the first victims to be identified. His shop foreman, James Moore, and another man also were killed.

Burmester said the boys were in the shop because they knew Knapp was short of help and they "wanted to help their dad out."

The victims in the street were not identified. One was a woman.

The plane was en route from Miami to Santo Domingo with a cargo of auto parts. The crew was identified as Capt. Jorge Bjosa, pilot; Carlos Brador, co-pilot; Carlos Gonzales, engineer; and Cesar Molina, assistant engineer.

The airport control tower radioed Bujosa that there was smoke coming from an engine as he took off.

"He acknowledged that and we told him he was cleared to land on any runway," said control tower chief Martin Hansen. Hansen added that the pilot was advised to try to ditch in the Miami River if he thought he couldn't make it back to the airport.

Man Crushed By Truck

NANAIMO — Independent trucker Jack Kolodychuk, 30, of Quilchena Crescent, was killed early Monday when a gravel truck backed over him.

RCMP refused to release the name of the truck driver until after the inquest on July 2. They said he was not facing any charges.

OAS ENTRY CONSIDERED?

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (CP-Reuters) — The secretary-general of the Organization of American States says Prime Minister Trudeau had told him there is some interest in Canada in joining the OAS.

However, Galo Plaza said Canada, before joining, wanted to establish a clear and definite policy in relation to the United States to be in a position to follow an independent course in the OAS.

Plaza told a news conference a Canadian delegation of five cabinet members which visited Latin America last year showed Canadian interest in the area. Canada would be more than welcome to join the OAS but the decision was up to Canada.

Stockholm Moves Keyed to Vietnam

By DAN MORGAN, The Washington Post

STOCKHOLM—If all goes as expected, North Vietnam will officially be represented by an ambassador in Sweden next Friday, while the United States will not.

On that day a North Vietnamese diplomat will present his credentials to King Gustav Adolf VI, making him the first official sent by Hanoi to be accredited in a West European country as an emissary. To underline the importance of the event, the king is taking the unusual step of coming back from his summer residence.

At the same time the king will also accept the credentials of a new Communist Chinese ambassador whose high position in his diplomatic service (former ambassador to Albania) is being taken by Swedes as a token of the high value Peking puts on its contacts here.

The official American explanation for the delay in naming a successor to William H. Heath, who departed five months ago, is that the king is out of town for the summer, though that seems less convincing in light of his scheduled return here next week.

Chilly Relations With U.S.

In fact, with all other Scandinavian posts now filled, American officials in Washington are said to be making little effort to conceal that the real reason for the holdup is the chilly state of relations between Sweden and the United States.

At the moment, these are in a state of petrification, no worse but hardly much better than in 1968 when Ambassador Heath was recalled for a month after Swedish Education Minister Olof Palme marched side by side with top visiting North Vietnamese officials in an anti-war march. This week the influential Dagens Nyheter paper took a swipe at what it called the "disgusting" practice of Republican administrations of appointing party hacks to West European posts.

On the other hand, some elements of the Swedish press appear to be trying to rationalize the American slight by speculating that Stockholm might become the site for resumed Chinese-American talks and hinting that the real reason for the delay is the state department's effort to come up with a qualified Chinese expert for the important Stockholm post.

By all estimates, little dramatic change is to be expected between America and this Scandinavian neutral. Political observers and Swedish party officials feel Palme, 42, will succeed to the prime ministership when Tage Erlander steps down voluntarily at the Social Democratic party congress in September.

Result of Domestic Pressure

Palme won the support of the party's left wing last year with his outspokenly critical position toward the U.S., but having done this he is believed likely to moderate his position now to prove to the voters that he is mature and sensible.

In the view of ranking Swedish officials and observers, the country's support of the North Vietnamese cause results at least as much from domestic political pressure as from foreign policy considerations.

"The government has no desire to get caught the way the German Social Democrats and the British Labor Party did on Vietnam," said a Swedish official this week. "Rather than fight the left on the issue, the party has decided to use and channel the movement. What better way can you think of to keep the left from turning on the government itself and demanding radical change in Swedish society?"

There has been no effective opposition to the country's heavy defence spending, for instance. Members of the Socialist Student Group (SSU) are campaigning listlessly for nationalization of the country's banks to weaken the alleged hold of the Wallenberg Banking House. But Social Democratic officials, whose party charter pledges them to nationalization, say that this is out of the question.

No Known Boycotts Yet

The only real uneasiness about the government's Vietnam position is found among a small number of industrialists who fear that the government is playing with fire. Businessmen with ties in the United States have pointed to resentment over Sweden's harboring of military deserters, to its support of North Vietnam and North Korea and to its treatment of military deserters as political refugees.

But so far there have been no known boycotts of Swedish products and it is business as usual, except for a brief refusal by the Teamsters' Union to unload Volvo cars in the United States last year.

"We must be prepared to face the consequences of a foreign policy which starts from the assumption that peace has broken out and that Sweden has complete freedom to act as it wants in foreign policy," one critic of his government's policies said this week.

Ironically, America itself seems to be providing most of the ammunition to the anti-Vietnam campaigns here, judging from the large number of English-language protest books on sale at student bookstores.

And Swedish officials are quick to point out that Sweden is still friendly to the "other America," and that the strongest opposition to the war is in America, with Sweden only second.

This division also shows up in opinion polls, which have indicated that most Swedes still consider that America contributes more to law and order in the world than the Soviet Union and that America is still among the countries "closest to Swedish hearts."

Bad LSD Trip May Be End

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 16-year-old youth in hospital recovering from a bad LSD trip may be beyond salvaging mentally, police said Monday.

Police said they found the boy in Vancouver's Kitsilano district Sunday suffering a deep gash on his forehead.

The youth told police he suffered the injury when God hit him with a length of pipe.

Officers who took the youth to Vancouver General Hospital said he appeared so far gone mentally he seemed beyond salvaging.

Hospital officials reported the youth's physical condition is good but they declined comment on his mental condition.

Session Program Similar to Closure

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

OTTAWA—The government is probably going to have to abandon its cherished hope of completing the catalogue of tired old business before parliament this week and starting anew in the fall with a fresh new program—the first real Trudeau session.

There are too many items of business lying around to hope to finish them in a few days, and Parliament will have to come back in September to continue the present session for a week or two, before launching on a new one.

This has been the untidy pattern in the past, and the hope of escaping from it to a more business-like calendar is one of the reasons for the repeated attempts to reform the rules of the Commons. As pressure of business has increased, governments have become increasingly frustrated by their inability to put through even their minimum program of legislation and increasingly anxious to have power to program Parliament.

The Pearson Government put through a reform establishing an All-Party Business Committee, but it proved ineffective and the cabinet departed from office leaving almost a full year's work on the parliamentary agenda.

DECREE IN ADVANCE

The Trudeau Government took a rush at the problems last year with the notorious 16A—a proposed rule which would have given the cabinet power to program an entire session by decreeing in advance the amount of time to be devoted to each piece of legislation.

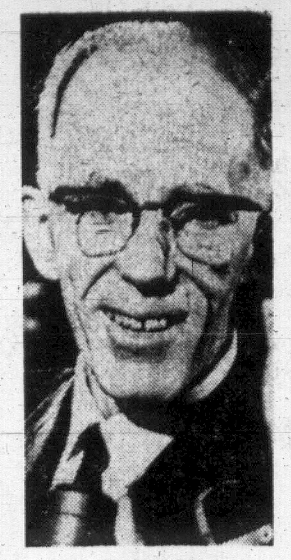
There was such an outcry that the government—having obtained other important reforms in the rules—agreed to withdraw 16A and to refer back to All-Party Procedures Committee the whole question of time limits on debates.

The report of the committee proposing yet another formula for allocating debating time was published last week, endorsed by the Liberal majority and opposed by Conservative, New Democrats and Creditistes. These opposition members are threatening a protracted fight against the new rules, and obviously hope to repeat their success of forcing the government to withdraw 16A.

But their task will be harder now because the proposed new rules, far from appearing a threat to a free parliament, seem to be so wrapped in safeguards as to be almost unusuable.

Very few parliamentarians, let along the general public, understand the intricacies of the rules. So a campaign to whip-up public opinion has to be based on slogans proclaiming the sovereignty of parliament and the iniquity of any government which seeks to impose its time-table. But it is important to realize that, in reality, no principle of parliamentary government is at stake.

Any issue of principle disappeared years ago when parliament accepted the right of the government majority to end debate by closure. The power of closure remains in the Common's rules and is so obviously necessary that no party proposes to remove it. But the present closure rule is clumsy, and what is now being discussed is a more effective way of allocating debating time. So what is at issue is not if there should be limitation of debate, but how to apply limits.



KNOWLES
. . . scheme author

All parties accept that when their respective House leaders agree on time to be spent on a bill, the government should be able to propose a motion making the agreement an order of the House by immediate vote. The effect of this would be to increase the power of the parties at the expense of individual members. When parties agreed, the private member would be able to vote against the agreement, but not too debate it.

When three parties agreed and one party dissented—there are four parties now in the Commons—the government would be able to propose a motion making the time limit agreement an order, but there would be two hours of debate before a vote. This would allow the fourth party to state its case, but not to prevent the time allocation coming into effect almost immediately.

The author of this curious scheme is no less an authority on the rules than NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles.

It would create interesting situations.

The Conservatives are the official opposition and may be expected to object to government proposals.

The smallest part is the Creditistes and they often seem to support the government on the parliamentary timetable.

But to overcome the opposition of the Conservatives to an allocation of time, the government would need a third pary—the NDP, which would put Knowles in a splendid bargaining position.

COULD BE FRUSTRATED

In another situation, 226 Liberals and Conservatives willing to support a time limit on debate could be frustrated by 37 New Democrats and Creditistes.

It is hard to understand why the Conservatives on the procedures committee accepted this NDP plan. The government went along, only because it was tacking on a third proposal for breaking deadlocks.

Under this third provision, the government would be able to take unilateral action to impose a time limit on debate when it had tried and failed to reach agreement with the opposition. Once a bill was before the House, the government would be able to give notice at each stage of its passage—at second reading, committee stage, and at report and third reading—to impose a time limit.

Under this arrangement, it would be possible in theory to introduce a bill and ram it though tihe Commons in 10 days, including four days of actual debate.

But to do that, a government would have to move three closure motions, one after the other, and cut so many corners that it would undoubtedly raise a national hue and cry.

It is the fear of public unpopularity, rather than the rules of procedure, which restrain governments, and no administration would wish to use the proposed new rules unless it felt forced to do so by unreasonable opposition and in a position to justify its action to the country. In fact, it is hard to imagine a situation in which a government would not find a compromise with the opposition preferable to the new form of closure.

Decision Upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — An appeal by Stanley Perskey against his April, 1968, conviction for loitering at the city's courthouse fountain was dismissed Monday in the British Columbia Court of Appeal. In upholding a decision by the B.C. Supreme Court, Mr. Justice H. W. Davey ruled the public is invited to "make reasonable use of" the courthouse grounds but this does not include "hanging around" or "doddling" in the area.

Yemeni Leftists Return, But Extremists Dropped

By DAVID HIRST

BEIRUT (The Manchester Guardian) — The leftwing extremists of South Yemen's ruling National Liberation Front (NLF), ousted in last year's power struggle, have staged their comeback—but they have probably shed some of their extremists in the process.

The removal of President Qahtan Shaabi, head of the moderate faction, could not have been accomplished without the tacit approval of the army which is strongly opposed to the Utopian Chinese-style socialism which the extremists have advocated. So the newly dominant leftwing will have to tread very carefully to preserve the army's tolerance.

If a report is correct that former Defence Minister Ali Beed is the real strong man of the latest takeover, it could be out of deference to the army that he has chosen to remain strictly an eminence grise.

The incongruous alliance between doctrinaire revolutionaries and officers cast in the British Imperial mould can be no more than a tactical convenience.

According to one report the leftists were spurred to action because they feared that the army, long believed to have such inclinations, might seize power for itself and form a coalition government including members of political groups like the Front for the Liberation of South Yemen (FLOSY) which the NLF has rigorously excluded since independence.

The military leaders, who last year backed Shaabi against his extremist rivals, apparently gave their blessing to the takeover in return for a promise from the leftists to fulfil certain demands which Shaabi had ignored.

But the promise is evidently only a half-hearted verbal one because the leftists, who once called for the dissolution of the regular army and its replacement by a popular militia with elected officers, are ideologically inhibited from too close an association with what they regard as a reactionary colonial legacy.

It is difficult to believe that the new rulers, though they are soberer than they were, will manage to preserve the army's good will for very long. The army, for example, is unlikely to take very kindly to any politics which aggravate relations—bad enough as they are — with the North where moderate tendencies are now in the ascendant. The new rulers' stated determination to "protect the revolutions in North and South Yemen" sounds like a declaration of their intent to interfere in their neighbors' affairs.

There are also latent divisions within the leadership itself, with a doctrinaire socialist like Abdul Fattah Ismail liable to party company with a more pragmatic leader like Muhammad Ali Haitham, regarded as the "army's man" in the new presidential council.

Heavy Fighting Surrounds Camp; Convoy Gets In

SAIGON (AP) — Bloody fighting raged around the besieged Ben Het Special Forces camp Monday and it sustained its heaviest artillery bombardment since May 1.

But U.S. spokesmen said today a convoy broke through the encircling North Vietnamese troops with badly needed ammunition and supplies.

The U.S. command said the convoy, the first to reach Ben Het in a week, pushed through by road from Dak To. Previously supplies had to be dropped by cargo planes and only medical evacuation helicopters risked landing because of the daily artillery barrages.

South Vietnamese infantry backed by U.S. artillery and planes killed 105 North Vietnamese troops around the camp Monday in some of the heaviest fighting there since May 1. South Vietnamese casualties were five killed.

North Vietnamese gunners poured in 195 shells into the camp 280 miles northeast of Saigon. The U.S. reported some of the American Green Beret advisers and artillery crew stations there were killed and wounded, but it declined to give figures.

Farther south along the Cambodian border, guerrillas shot down an American C—130 cargo plane loaded with ammunition as it was coming in for a landing at the Katum Special Forces camp. Four officers and two men were killed when the plane crashed and exploded.

BUS STOP BUSSER RAPPED FOR ASSAULT

CALGARY (CP) — A city man who stole a kiss from a girl at a bus stop had to pay $250 when he slapped a woman for interrupting his moment of bliss.

That was the fine handed out in court after the bus stop busser pleaded guilty to a charge of assault Monday.

Court was told the man stopped his car at the bus stop and ran up to kiss a girl he knew. But in mid-buss, a second woman at the stop slapped the man on the back of the head.

He retaliated with a slap of his own, which cut the woman's lip, resulting in the assault charge.

Leaders of this tiny, prosperous Southeast Asian state are waging an all-out struggle to remain a British protectorate, despite London's announced intention of withdrawing its defence forces from Southeast Asia by the end of 1971.

Sir Omar Ali Saifuddin, the former sultan and now chief adviser to his 22-year-old son, Sultan Hassanal Bolkiah, made plain that Brunei wishes to continue its 80 years under British protection.

He said Brunei, with a population of 130,000, would not be satisfied with any alternative to the 1959 arrangements under which Britain remains responsible for the defence, foreign affairs and security of the state.

PRESSES FOR ELECTION

Britain has been pressing for a democratically elected government in the tiny state, which is divided by a sliver of Malaysia's Sarawak territory.

But the Brunei People's Independence party, which urges independence now, does not believe the British want to go.

Some influential British residents here wonder if Saifuddin, who wields most of the power in Brunei despite his abdication in his son's favor in 1967, is stalling in the hope that the Conservative party will regain power in Britain and reverse, or at least alter, the withdrawal policy.

He has given no indication whether he will accept British advice to increase the number of elected members in the legislative council, currently dominated by the sultan's nominees and selected ministers.

Saifuddin says full parliamentary democracy is 20 years away.

Pollution Responsibility Ducked by Ottawa—Tory

By ALEXANDER FARRELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition members complained Monday that the federal government is hiding behind the skirts of the constitution instead of facing the problems of water, air and soil pollution.

Gordon Aiken (PC — Parry Sound - Muskoka), spearheading the attack, told the Commons the federal government has the biggest responsibility in this area and is not meeting it.

The government's excuse that progress had to be slow because the provinces shared jurisdiction was "wearing very thin."

"The most essential need is for the federal government to demonstrate that it will take the lead in an all-out fight against pollution right across the country. This it has not done."

Outside the Commons, party House leaders failed to come to an agreement for the House to sit longer hours this week to pave the way for a summer adjournment starting Friday.

TURN DOWN REQUEST

A government request to sit Wednesday and Friday nights, Thursday morning and all day Saturday was rejected by the opposition House leaders when the government said part of the business it wants passed before the holidays is a controversial rule change.

The new rule would allow the government to limit debate at any stage of a bill.

Today is St. Jean Baptiste Day and in honor of the French-Canada holiday, the Commons will not sit. It goes back to work Wednesday at 2 p.m. EDT.

Ron Harding (NDP — Kootenay West) said the biggest obstacle on the road to a pollution solution is the "jurisdictional muddle in regard to what the provinces, the municipalities and the federal government each can or cannot do."

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said the federal government has the legal means to deal with pollution problems if it wants to use them.

All three speakers criticized the government for not introducing water resources legislation that had been promised last fall.

The debate was triggered by a motion by Mr. Aiken blasting the government for failing to assert federal authority and to take effective measures to combat pollution.

Monday was an opposition day in the Commons, a day on which the opposition could choose the subject for debate. Under Commons rules, the motion did not come to a vote.

Mr. Aiken said a 1966 conference of resources ministers in Montreal was an "excellent pollution conference" that should have been followed up.

Otto Lang, minister without portfolio, said the federal government offered two years ago to join one or more provinces in each region of the country in pilot studies on river basin planning.

The Ottawa River was one waterway they had in mind, but neither Quebec nor Ontario had agreed to discuss joint planning on the project.

But more progress has been made elsewhere, the minister said. "We are actively negotiating agreements with British Columbia, Saskatchewan and New Brunswick."

Mr. Lang has been designated by Prime Minister Trudeau as the minister responsible for resources.

Mr. Harding said the energy, mines and resources department, responsible for dealing with water resources, has not even adopted standards to enforce in the fight against pollution.

"It is the duty of this government, which has hidden behind the gimmick of constitutional issues in order not to accept responsibility for pollution control, to iron out constitutional problems in this field," he said.

URGES CO-ORDINATION

Mr. Aiken said co-ordination of policy and effort between the federal and provincial levels is needed across the country.

In reply to complaints about the delay in presenting the proposed Canada water act, Mr. Lang said he had hoped to introduce it this week but it will not be ready until later in the summer. He therefore planned to issue a policy statement in July, along with a draft of the bill.

The act would permit strong federal initiatives where needed, while establishing a framework for federal-provincial action.

Leonard Hopkins (L—Renfrew North) said it is irresponsible of the opposition to talk about pollution—without recognizing the jurisdictional conflict.

He favored stronger powers for the federal government, "but we can't ignore the constitution."

Manitoba Voters Faced By New Party Leaders

WINNIPEG (CP — Manitobans vote Wednesday in a provincial election, three years and two days after the last province-wide vote and with a change of leadership in the three major parties.

For the Progressive Conservatives, it is Premier Walter Weir in place of Duff Roblin. The Liberals have R. W. (Bobby) Bend as successor to Gil Molgat and the New Democrats, rushed into a convention less than three weeks before voting day, have Ed Schreyer in place of A. R. (Russ) Paulley.

This new-faces factor was one of the reasons given by Mr. Weir for calling the election. He dissolved the legislature in mid-session although his party held a working majority and had won three of four byelections this year.

"These changes in leadership leave the people a completely different choice than was available to them at the last election," Mr. Weir said.

More important was the change of electoral boundaries brought about by a redistribution bill given royal assent before the legislature was dissolved May 22—leaving the number of seats at 57, but increasing urban representation to 29 seats from 20.

At dissolution, the legislature standing was Conservatives 31, Liberals 13, NDP 12, Social Credit one.

SEEKS FOUR STRAIGHT

Mr. Weir, 40, who became premier with victory at a leadership convention in 1967, will be seeking to lead the Conservatives to their fourth straight victory since 1958.

Mr. Bend, 55, a veteran of Manitoba's last Liberal government 11 years ago, returned to politics after Mr. Molgat decided Feb. 20 to vacate the leadership because of byelection losses.

Mr. Schreyer, 33, resigned as the MP for Selkirk after he was chosen to succeed Mr. Paulley, 59, who stepped down because of poor health.

There are 521,240 eligible voters compared with 508,974 in 1966, when 331,545 cast ballots for a turnout of 65 per cent. Voting hours Wednesday are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. CDT.

There are 184 candidates in the field with the major parties represented in all constituencies. Social Credit, which entered 18 candidates in 1966, is contesting only six ridings and there are five independents and two Communists.

INFANTS DEATHS HIT LOW

OTTAWA (CP) — The infant mortality rate fell to a record low last year, 20.8 per 1,000 live births compared with 22.0 in 1967, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

Infant mortality rates are the number of deaths of children under one year of age per 1,000 live births.

DBS said the national death rate for all children and adults remained at its record low of 7.4 per 1,000 population, set in 1967.

The number of deaths in Canada rose slightly to 153,196 from 150,283 in 1967, but this was in line with the increase in population.

Half the deaths were due to diseases of the heart and circulatory system. Cancer accounted for 18.7 per cent of ~~all~~ deaths and accidents took 7.5 per cent.

UNIVERSITIES CAUTIONED BY PUBLISHER

Change That Upheaval Image!

By BOB MITCHELL

Canadian universities are overdue for a change in their public image, a newspaper publisher told delegates at a University of Victoria symposium today.

Stuart Keate, of the Vancouver Sun, described how people not connected with the universities see them in the light of recent campus upheavals.

"It's a simple fact that four out of five Canadians never get to a university, and are inclined to view them with skepticism, if not hostility.

"I am sure we all shuddered two months ago when the number two man in Mr. Nixon's justice department, Richard Kliendienst, suggested that student radicals should be corralled and placed in detention camps.

"It's amazing how many sober and responsible Canadians thought the simplest solution to this problem would be to close the universities down."

However, Keate said there is considerable public sympathy toward student complaints of overcrowded classes, poor teaching and limited enrolment, especially at the University of B.C.

"When my daughter talks of attending a history class in the auditorium with a professor addressing 650 students over a microphone, I am astonished to realize this is equal to about half the total student population in the hungry 30s.

"Reflecting on those ancient times, I find it ironic that serenity at Point Grey was achieved in an era of truly grinding poverty, while sit-ins and mass protests occur in an atmosphere of affluence."

Keate said the key job facing the universities today is "to produce civilized, sensitive men and women who can live with one another.

"They will feel that the obscenities of our literature are minor and evanescent when compared to the obsenities of war, starvation and of big people pushing little people around."

Keate has been publisher of the Sun since 1964. He has also sat on the UBC senate and board of governors, but intends to retire due to a conflict with his newspaper interest.

The two-day Uvic symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society ended today.

Bryant Caught in the Open By Secret Council Meeting

Esquimalt council held a half-hour closed committee meeting Monday although Mayor Ray Bryant said earlier there would be no secret session.

The meeting was called after the open council meeting to discuss a land acquisition which arose out of an earlier traffic committee meeting.

Mayor Bryant said he was not aware this item was on the agenda when he spoke with the Times Monday morning.

Before council resolved itself into a secret committee of the whole to discuss the issue Bryant made a point of reading the bylaw which permits secrecy when dealing with land acquisition.

"Resolved that council go into a committee of the whole to discuss this land acquisition and in the opinion of council it is necessary in the public interest that only members of council and officers be present," he read.

The motion was passed unanimously.

Secrecy in council meetings became a public issue last week when Oak Bay council broke a 40-year tradition of secrecy after reporters refused to leave the closed committee of the whole meeting.

Esquimalt also has a tradition of going into secret session after council meetings but does so only after a formal motion has been passed. Oak Bay had been ignoring this technicality.

NO NOTICES

Bryant said Monday these secret meetings will continue in Esquimalt when council was dealing with land acquisitions, personnel or confidential federal or provincial government matters.

He also repeated his earlier statement that group A (fire, finance and zoning) and group B (parks, public works and traffic) committee meetings are open to the press.

However, neither reporters nor the public receive any advance notification of these meetings.

They are not held at regular intervals but whenever committee members feel there is enough business to warrant holding a meeting.

Bryant suggested reporters call municipal engineer William Gerry to find out when these meetings will be held.

Mayors Voice Opposition To Early Hospital Vote

One member of the Capital Region District Hospital Board opposes any referendum this year on acute care hospital beds, while another would prefer a spring vote.

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant said Monday he would not support a new referendum until there is "visible evidence" of extended care beds approved in a 1968 referendum.

And Saanich's mayor, Hugh Curtis, said a spring referendum would have a better chance of approval, allowing time for a better outline of how the money would be spent, and for the extended care beds to begin construction.

They were reacting to an announcement Monday by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark that a new referendum would be ready by the end of 1969.

DECISIONS NEEDED

"I am not prepared to suport a referendum this year," Mayor Bryant said. "There are still about 10 decisions which have to be made" concerning allocation of beds under the 1968 referendum.

Mayor Curtis said a spring vote would have a better informed electorate.

"While it is important that the referendum be put at the earliest possible time, it will ask approval for a large amount of money. It should carry a fairly comprehensive outline of how the money is to be allocated."

He said a fall vote could prove harmful to hospital development.

ALLOCATIONS PROMISED

Mayor Bryant said he wanted the voters to see evidence of the $9.3 million extended care facilities before they're asked to vote again.

The health minister said all allocations of hospital beds under the 1968 referendum would be completed before the new referendum is put to the voters.

The acute bed referendum would call for an estimated $20 million to $30 million to be spent over the next six years on hospital additions in this area.

GOT A GRIPE ON TRAFFIC?

Do other people's driving habits drive you crazy and leave you frustrated?

The Greater Victoria and District Safety Council would like to hear from the public on how to improve driver and pedestrian safety.

In doing so they feel they could act as an accident prevention ombudsman.

They want people to write them about traffic problems.

They want you to vent your wrath on bicyclists, drivers and passengers of cars and motorcycles, horseback riders and pedestrians.

Meanwhile, the British Columbia Automobile Association, in preparation for the July 1 holiday weekend and as part of their "Bring 'Em Back Alive" campaign, has released some suggestions they think drivers should follow.

Drivers not in top emotional and physical condition should stay at home.

Fresh air in the car, whistling, "rock 'n' roll" or martial music help to keep a driver from becoming drowsy on long trips.

A comfortable seat position and regular rest periods keep drivers alert and aware of other persons' driving.

Fire Strikes Inn Again

A faulty temperature control device started the second kitchen fire within a week today at the Queen Victoria Inn, 655 Douglas.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said the device, contained in a deep fat fryer, was supposed to have been fixed following the first fire.

About $300 damage was done in the blaze this morning.

After a $450 fire Friday, the device was sent to be fixed and later re-installed. However, the deputy said the electrician apparently didn't find the trouble and sent it back thinking it was repaired.

The kitchen will be out of operation for a few days and the deputy said he had suggested a new device be purchased.

Hairy Youth Doesn't Miff Educator, 74

Long hair, nudity and sexual promiscuity do not mean the younger generation is going to pot, Dr. Norman MacKenzie, former University of British Columbia president, said Monday.

"I'm not too concerned about the behavior or misbehavior of some of our radical students. I don't care whether they wear their hair to their knees."

Dr. MacKenzie spoke at a banquet of delegates attending the University of Victoria symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society.

He said the Depression had forced his own generation to be preoccupied with security and material goals, whereas the students of the affluent sixties are concerned with issues such as injustice and inequality.

CHASTITY NOT KEY

"Though I'm inclined to feel a case can be made for a measure of chastity in human relations, including marriage, it's not really a central issue—I think it can lead to happier lives than promiscuity.

"In respect to drugs I'm less happy. Until we get more detailed information on drugs we should be concerned that our young people are experimenting with them."

Dr. MacKenzie said Canadian universities should extend a welcome to American students and faculty members who decide to come to Canada.

He said social unrest in the U.S. is understandable, because it stems directly from opposition to the Vietnam war and racial oppression.

"It is not surprising that Canadian students, realizing the publicity they can get on radio and television, want to get in on the act.

"Happily, we don't have as many problems here, but we are becoming more and more a part of the U.S., not only because of the presence of so many Americans, but also because issues south of the border are being used by Canadian students."

Missing Roofing Delays Building Of Five Schools

By JIM HUME

Lack of steel roof decking is jeopardizing a $1 million five-school construction program in School District 63.

Brian Shaw, superintendent of buildings and grounds for the district, admitted this morning that work on five schools from Brentwood to Claremont is virtually at a standstill and will remain so until steel decking is delivered from Vancouver.

He termed the delivery delay by Westeel-Roscoe "inexcusable".

Five of six District 63 schools are feeling the pinch.

They, Keating's Elementary ($368,853); Brentwood ($290,378); Deep Cove, ($66,999); Saanichton ($96,002) and Claremont ($111,981). A sixth school at Sidney ($210,884) is proceeding on schedule having received delivery of its roof decking.

Shaw said delays in delivery of the steel decking had placed the five schools well behind schedule.

"But," he added, "if the decking arrives on July 7 as we now predict, it can be installed by July 11 and then, with contractors and the architects working hard on a revised work schedule, we could get the jobs finished on time.

School Board Partly Blamed

"Everyone involved will have to work hard because there will be no time to spare. But it can be done."

While Shaw blames the Vancouver steel company for failing to deliver the steel decking on time, A. H. Ormiston, a member of the Amalgamated Construction Association regional committee, says much of the blame must rest with School District 63 school board.

"This is what happens when you split contracts," Ormiston said. "The steel company's contract is directly with the school board, not as it usually is with the general contractor.

"As a result the general contractor has no control over this particular bid. The system, which may appear good on the surface, invites confusion.

"It can only be described as an unfortunate way of doing business."

Shaw admits to confusion but insists that from his end the program was clear cut and well-defined.

"We wrote Westeel on March 11 of this year informing them that they were low bidders and informing them of what we required in the way of performance," Shaw said. "There is no excuse for this kind of delay at this stage."

Until, the decking arrives, interior work must be delayed with subsequent backing up of all parts of the program.

Shaw said he was originally assured that the steel decking would be on the construction sites by June 16. It is already eight days overdue, and Shaw expected July 7 delivery is just a "prediction."

"They assured me in June that all they needed was two or three days notice to get the steel over here," he said. "They said they had the material available in Vancouver.

"But there appears to have been some misunderstanding between the supplier and the contractor with the supplier saying the shop drawings for the decking had not been made available."

Other sources say the misunderstanding arose when the steel company made a package bid for the schools and understood that delivery of the steel would not be required until all schools had arrived at the roofing stage.

YARROWS DROPS 40 MORE

Forty more workers are out of jobs at Yarrows Ltd. shipyard.

Yarrows general manger John Wallace said the men—all welders—will be laid off today or Wednesday.

Last week the company laid off 43 shipfitters, nine burners and 10 helpers.

Wallace said rehiring should begin in about three weeks. It will take a while to build up—it always takes longer to rehire than to lay off, he said.

"Those laid off will be brought back if they're still available," he said.

Wallace disagreed with the proposal for a steel industry in British Columbia to prevent dependence on Japanese steel.

"We wouldn't have the sales to support it," he said.

Neil Hindle, business agent for Local 191, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Monday criticized federal and provincial governments for failing to encourage a steel industry in the west.

In spite of the delay of steel from Japan, and deadlines the company is facing, Wallace does not believe there is a threat of loss of contracts "at this point."

Police Take Over Exam Theft Probe

Investigation of the theft last week of departmental exams from Esquimalt Senior Secondary has been turned over to Esquimalt police.

Chief Earl Sarsiat said today the police investigation is "nearing a conclusion," but declined to say how many persons were involved in the theft.

He said if charges are laid against students under 18 they would be brought before juvenile court.

SUSPENSION

Esquimalt Senior Secondary principal Clive Kelly said the department of education's board of examiners would take steps to suspend the students' exam marks and graduation if they are found guilty.

The stolen exams were among those written between Monday and Thursday of last week.

An investigation committee formed by the school and the department learned the names of persons involved before turning the matter over to the board of examiners, who in turn called in police.

BLOOD CLINIC RESPONSE HALF-HEARTED

Only 101 donors went to Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street at a three-hour afternoon clinic.

The drive continues until Thursday and the aim is 725 pints.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you give me the address of Edward Kennedy Ellington, better known as Duke? M.C.

A. Duke Ellington's address is: 52 West 58th Street, New York City, 10019, U.S.A.

Arthur Mayse . . .

Follow Interurban Road southeast past Hyacinth Park, and you come to a little wooden bridge. Beneath this bridge, Colquitz Creek threads a narrow valley which for years was choked by brush.

The creek itself was more guessed at than seen. Rank grass drooped into it, thickets overhung it, and its surface was scummed with pondweed.

Today, the creek runs free beneath its bridge. For about 200 yards upstream, the east slope has been cleared except where some young axeman decided that a clump or a tree was worth saying.

Even without further improvement, that strip of Saanich municipal land will make a pleasant picnic site. But please, if you use it, leave no litter behind to mar a scene that cost much toil and sweat, and even a little blood.

Although the project hatched by practical visionary Joe Pilot and approved by Saanich parksmen is a mere nick in the Colquitz restoration, it points the way to further ribbon-park development.

Also it shows what can be accomplished when a bunch of keen volunteers decides that self-help beats waiting around for a hard-pressed municipal government to act.

The cleanup began last Thursday morning. On Saturday afternoon, when we drove over to see if there was room in the ranks for two more brush-whackers, those same volunteers had turned in about $600 worth of labor at municipal rates.

A couple of kids in a yellow smallboat were raking weed from the creek. Occasionally the rakes brought up junk from the stream bed to enlarge a pile on the shore.

Across the creek, some boys were noisily laying into lush growth with machetes. Upslope on our side, was a headquarters of sorts. Someone had lugged a table in from the road. It supported a camp stove on which a pot of beans simmered.

At one end of the table, St. John Ambulance senior Mrs. Reindeer Schuitema of 5307 Patricia Bay Highway and Cadet Debbie Dwyer of 569 Baker Street had set up a first-aid post.

From farther along the creek came the steady chunking of edged tools against wood.

Joe Pilot, who possibly started life with a more workaday but less symbolic name, wasn't around. Barry Billan of 1160 Burdette explained procedure to us.

There was no formal organization. Everyone chose his own job and handled it as he saw fit. Still, if our thing happened to be grubbing out roots, here were parks department tools, and yonder a patch that bristled with sapling stubs.

About 40 of us were strung along the creek, working under a cloudy sky pierced by occasional sunshine. Bouncing a mattock off stubborn roots, I wondered if the work-bees old people tell of were marked by the same cheerful camaraderie.

It was Payne who had fetched camp stove, beans and a mound of buns to the site.

He'd looked in on the work party several times, and liked what he saw going on there.

"So I felt the least I could do was come out and feed 'em," he told us.

Among others who shared his feeling were Lorne Ebell of Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, and his wife, Barbara. The two put their Saturday into lending a hand with a job they thoroughly approved.

Colquitz and Craigflower are streams too good to lose, Lorne pointed out. This limited drive to salvage one little valley was a start in the right direction.

Saanich, said municipal works foreman Frank Andrews, may put a waterweed cutter along the opened stretch of creek. That move would carry the reclamation a stage farther.

Perhaps it will continue like that, in fits and starts over the next few years.

In any case, it's worth remembering that the job was begun as a community project, by people who didn't seek or receive a nickel for their labors.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Martine Discovers Habitant Carvings

By PENNY SAVER

If you are looking for someone to blame for the nasty weekend weather, try Mathilda's niece. Martine arrived from Quebec on Friday evening and we've scarcely seen the sun since.

"I thought Victoria was immune to weather," she said with a laugh as we battled the wind Saturday.

"It's our first day of spring celebration," Mathilda explained. "With a liner making its first visit and Esquimalt holding its annual celebrations the weather wouldn't dare be good. After all, the whole purpose of weather is to make people miserable."

We huddled into the store we were heading for and began looking around. We had brought Martine to this store because we knew it was filled with all sorts of hand-crafted souvenirs. She walked around the tables, looking with interest at the pottery and natural stone jewelry. Suddenly she began to laugh.

"Aunt Mathilda, look," she said, picking up a tiny statue. "I have come all the way from Quebec to find Quebecois handicrafts. And sure enough, the wood carving she was holding was hand-made in Quebec.

The wood carvings Martine discovered may be old hat to Easterners, but to Victorians and West Coast visitors who haven't made it past the Rockies it is quite exciting. Known as habitant art, the pieces depict farming scenes and are carved with an unbelievable delicacy.

Mathilda picked up one of the $1.68 bookmarks and began examining the tiny weather beaten face set on the dark wooden peg that slips over the pages.

"This must be ivory," she commented. "Surely no one could cut wood as finely as that."

"Yet wood it is," replied Martine. "I believe it is called bas wood. I don't know what they call the longer grained dark wood that is used as well."

Farmer By a Well

Some of the pieces are made into scenes. One for instance showed an old farmer standing beside a well. There is a scrap of log fence by the well and the well includes a tiny cover and bucket. A glass ashtray is built into the base making it practical as well as pretty. The most amazing part is that this scene is no taller than three inches at the most. There are similar ashtray sets with the farmer standing beside a tiny cabin. These sets are $7 each.

For $3.96 there are salt and pepper shaker sets. These are made of the darker, long grained wood and are tall and somewhat pyramidal in shape.

Tiny cameo portraits of habitants made of the white bas wood are set onto the sides. Pen stands are $4.50 each.

Never having been much good at carving myself (my most artistic efforts are by-products of my attempts to peel potatoes and always end up in the pot), I was amazed at some of the effects these French-Canadian carvers are capable of. People seem to be favorite subjects and there are dozens of figurines ranging from $2.95 to $33.50 in price and from only a few inches tall to close to a foot in height.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for the name of the store where this habitant art was found.

Ex-Prison Matron Sees Jail Changes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. T. E. Olson, a prison matron for 15 years, has retired here at the age of 60. The grandmother has been employed as a matron at nearby Oakalla prison for 11 years and was previously at the Prince George prison for women, in the Cariboo.

Mrs. Olson began prison work in 1953. "I had helped out at the Kamloops jail when they needed a matron, so when my husband became ill in Prince George I took a job I was really interested in."

Asked about the greatest change she has seen since beginning her work, she replied that the attitude to imprisonment is different today than formerly.

"Jail is no longer punishment but treatment." She added that counselling is considered important in women's institutions today.

"When I first started work as a matron, counselling was not considered part of the job. You just listened and tried to help if one of the girls wanted to talk.

"Today each girl is assigned a matron for this kind of help."

She also said parole is important. "It gives the girls something to look forward to, which is all part of the treatment."

As for the future, Mrs. Olson said, "I really can't get used to the extra time on my hands." A vacation, some housework and gardening will come before any other plans are made, she added.

Doctor Battles Law On Illegal Abortion

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — An Australian doctor apparently has lost a battle to get himself prosecuted for carrying out an abortion.

In a challenge to Australia's tough anti-abortion laws, Dr. Bertram Wainer, a member of the Abortion Reform Society, said Tuesday he had performed an illegal abortion on a 23-year-old unmarried woman who was deeply depressed. The 40-year-old general practitioner later delivered a signed confession to police.

Abortion is a criminal offence throughout Australia. However, George Reid, attorney-general for Victoria state, said Sunday night that Wainer's action came within the law and that no crime had been committed.

Reid said there is a 1958 court ruling that abortions can be carried out if the physical and mental health of the mother is in danger.

In his written confession, Wainer said he had consulted three psychiatrists before the abortion.

Pearl gets invited to a lot of weddings

Why? Because Porphyry Pearl's clear pearly colour, zesty bubbles, and not-too-sweet, not-too-dry taste . . . all add up to a delicious and eye-appealing treat.

Imported from the vineyards of Australia, this is fine light wine you can serve with pride and confidence. For an occasion such as toasting the bride. Or simply a private toast at home. Because Porphyry Pearl is pure wine . . . made 100% from grapes. Porphyry Pearl creates its own bubbles – all by itself.

Try Porphyry Pearl soon.

Porphyry Pearl

. . . serve it cold, it speaks a warm welcome.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Her Date Flirts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who has been dating this fellow (divorced) and we are both in our late thirties. There is no steady arrangement but we do enjoy each other's company. Here's the problem:

Everytime we go out he makes a fuss over the waitress, has to find out her first name and from then on he's on a first name basis with her.

The last time we went out, we sat at a piano bar and the waitress sat down next to him and complained about how tired she was. Well, he proceeded to rub her back while she cooed and ahhhhhed about how good it felt.

Needless to say I was embarrassed to death and everyone around was taking it all in. I said nothing but I was very angry and let him know it when we were alone. This led to an argument. He said I was a snob and that he was just being sociable. I should be so sociable with a bartender! What do you think?

No Snob.

DEAR NO: I think if your friend wants to socialize with waitresses he should see them on his own time. And theirs. And from the sound of your letter, he probably does. You won't change him. So either accept him as he is or lose him.

DEAR ABBY: Our problem is how to respond to the strange and inappropriate gifts we receive from our son on Mother's Day and Father's Day. He is married and lives in another state.

For example, last Mother's Day I received a plastic bracelet, which only a teenager would wear. Plus a book which was a novel about a young boy who yearned to pitch in a big league baseball game. I cannot for the life of me imagine why anyone would think I would enjoy such a book.

The Father's Day gifts my husband receives are equally ridiculous and hold no significance for him whatsoever.

I wanted to write our son and ask for some explanation of these odd and inappropriate gifts, but my husband prevailed upon me to simply thank him without comment. What is your advice?

Nameless, Please.

DEAR NAMELESS: Same as your husband's. But the next time you see your son, ask him who selects those gifts.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to NANCY was perfect. There are husbands who are so sensitive and sympathetic to their wives that they actually suffer right along with them.

My father was that way. I still remember one morning right in the middle of breakfast, my father turned pale, got up from the breakfast table and made his way to the bathroom where he was very sick indeed. Then I heard my mother say, "Well, I'm certain now."

Later when Mother started having labor pains, my father doubled up in agony. He was always such a sweet and sympathetic man. A girl is lucky to have such a father.

Daughter of One.

CONFIDIENTIAL TO SHORT ON WILL POWER: Try harder. And commit this brilliant quote by Franc Shor to memory: "Self-discipline can be just as self-satisfying as self-indulgence. And infinitely more rewarding."

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Follicle Fallout Blows Your Mind

By MARGARET CUMMINS

WASHINGTON — Yul Brynner can get by without it, but most people tend to lose their heads when their hair goes.

Those who have watched their thatches thin say it's a personal experience, between them and their bathroom mirrors. No one else — husbands, wives, girl friends, boy friends or the pet parakeet —cares.

It doesn't matter how often men are told baldness is hereditary and being bald means they're smarter or more virile.

"I used to spend more time in the bathroom than my wife, twisting every last available hair around to cover the bald spots. It got so I hated to go out," said a 35-year-old suburban building contractor. "My wife couldn't have cared less."

"I felt as if my husband had been short-changed; he's so handsome," confessed a 48-year-old Negro woman who lost a good deal of her hair three years ago after using some straightening products.

"But he didn't mind. He used to say he had two wives—one with a crewcut and the other with a wig."

No one knows exactly why baldness is increasing.

"All kinds of things have been blamed: DDT, atomic fallout, more tension, pollution," says Dr. Peter Horvath, head of the dermatology department for Georgetown University Medical Centre.

Reasons given by doctors for women losing their hair more these days range from back-combing to use of more chemicals. One doctor claims that Washington has more baldies because of the number of government employees "sitting around with nothing to do. They're constantly nervous and their hair starts falling out."

"But anybody who is going bald is pretty disturbed about it. I've never been able to sell my patients on the Yul Brynner idea; going bald aggressively," says Dr. Horvath ("I have a full head of brown hair, thank you.")

Other doctors stress that, like it or not, American men and women will grab for any bubble in the fountain of youth. "It's sad, but it's true," said a New York doctor. "And they'll spend almost anything."

For baldies determined to face the world with hair on their heads, there are three basic alternatives, none of which is cheap:

- Hair transplants (one of Frank Sinatra's and Hugh Downs' solutions).
- Toupee or wig.
- Hair weaving or wefting.

The simplest of hair transplant procedures, started about 16 years ago by New Yorker Dr. Norman Orentreich, basically involves transferring hair plugs from one part of the head to the other.

With the patient under local anesthesia, a small electrical instrument literally punches tiny holes in the scalp. Each plug contains about 12 to 15 hairs and costs 5 to 25 dollars depending on the doctor.

Each operation involves about 50 plugs and then the subject can sit back and wait about three months for those first glorious sprouts.

More complicated transplants involve resodding the scalp with whole skin grafts containing 100 to 500 hairs. The average cost is about $500.

Psychological Difficulties

Wigs and toupees, which can cost as much as $1,000 are difficult for some people to accept psychologically.

Probably the simplest and most deceptive option for anyone wanting to conceal his or her alopecia—and assuming there is some hair left—is hair weaving or wefting.

Dr. Orentreich, the hair transplant originator, approves the hair weaving method if it's done professionally so that the extra traction does not pull out remaining hair.

"Each head has to be assessed individually and a combination may be the answer for some people."

The hair-weaving technique was started some years ago in Harlem, primarily for Negro women whose own hair had been damaged through straightening chemicals and for musicians who wanted a heftier head of hair.

The Washington and Baltimore firm specializing exclusively in hair weaving—which they call the "hair weft technique"—is Vadim, Ltd., run by brothers Roger, 27, and Byron Petitto, 24. They learned the method in Harlem and refined it to suit both caucasian and negroid hair textures.

"We've seen no signs of hair loss," said Roger.

People who have wefts from Vadim include businessmen, lawyers, musicians, politicians, a manager of a hamburger take-out place, a medical school student, and a construction firm superintendent.

Basically the process involves weaving a new foundation of hair into the customer's existing growth, using a crochet stitch with nylon, silk and existing hair strands.

"If there is three or four inches above the ear, we can do the weft," says Petitto.

The price ranges from $100 to $450, depending on the color of hair to be matched and the degree of baldness. A tightening up, $15 to $25, is necessary about every two months and many come back for a shampoo and styling ($7.50) weekly.

The old hair-weaving process, Petitto said, had as many as five or six foundations. The Vadim hair weft involves only one with the shape contoured to the bare spots.

League Presents Money to Solarium

Queen Alexandra Solarium Junior League presented $20,000 to Lieut.-Col. C. W. King, president of the Solarium board of directors, at its annual meeting.

The money, raised through various projects and donations over the past year, will be used for maintenance of the building. President Mrs. Ted Lunt also announced that money raised was used to purchase cards and favors for children patients at Christmas, Easter, Hallowe'en and Valentine's Day.

Mrs. Lunt was re-elected president for the coming year.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. R. N. Hayes, vice-president; Mrs. Thomas Chalmers, corresponding secretary; Miss Judy Gonnason, recording secretary; Mrs. K. R. Black, treasurer; Mrs. E. W. Yates; publicity; Mrs. Nim Sundher, membership; and Mrs. Gary Easton, board member.

Mrs. Ralph Nickels was presented with a diamond pin and life membership pin for 14 years of service to the Junior League. Mrs. H. C. McNair and Miss Mavis McCahill received "A"s as outstanding associate members.

LEAVE FOR NATO POSTING

Indian Act Unfair to Women

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Association of University Women Saturday passed a strongly-worded resolution protesting sections in the Indian Act that "can deprive an Indian woman of her nationality."

The resolution supports a petition made by Indian women from the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal to the Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

Under the act, an Indian woman on marriage to a non-Indian is deprived of rights she and her children are entitled to as members of an Indian band. They include the right to vote in band councils, to raise her children as "Indian," to send children to reserve schools, to share in the social life of the reserve and to be buried in a reserve cemetery.

Mrs. Guy Monty of Lachine, Que., said that if Indian women return to the reserve on the death of their non-Indian husband, they often take care of ill and aged relatives. But they and their children run into petty restrictions—the children are not allowed to swim in the reserve pool, she said.

The resolution says the act contravenes the Canadian Citizenship Act which declares the nationality of a wife to be independent of that of the husband, and a similar principle in the United Nations Convention of 1957.

"To an Indian woman, the Indian nationality is as necessary a fact of life as Canadian nationality is to other citizens, because very often her economic and social status is dependent on it."

The resolution was introduced by the federation's committee on the status of women, headed by June Menzies of Winnipeg.

The federation also endorsed a resolution introduced by Mrs. G. G. Cameron, president of the University Women's Club of London, Ont. It asks the federal government to exempt people below the minimum poverty line from taxation.

The minimum poverty line was defined by the Economic Council of Canada in 1968 as $1,800 for a single person, $3,000 for a couple and $4,200 for a family of four.

The resolution said these people cannot escape adverse effects of inflationary price increases and are forced to pay taxes with income they need for basic living.

This was offered as an alternative to a narrower resolution from London, Ont., asking for increased exemption for elderly teachers on pension.

Mrs. Sherwood Lett of the Vancouver club Saturday said she would donate $1,000 to be divided into two awards for music competition. The awards are to be made to students, one in 1970, another in 1971, as a tribute to the federation's 50th anniversary.

No Minis For First Lady

But that was long ago, when her husband, Georges Pompidou, was merely premier.

Her hemline has come down slightly, but she does not intend to become too ostentatiously elegant.

"I do not think the French people want the president's wife to be excessively fashionable," she said in a recent interview.

Nonetheless, the fashion correspondent of Le Figaro says Claude's clothes can be expected to outshine those of her predecessors.

"I know what people have been saying about my hems, my slacks and my Bermuda shorts," Claude said when questioned about her clothes. "But I like to dress like a woman of my time, who still takes account of the circumstances in which she wears this or that dress."

SFU Feminists Fight Feeling of Inferiority

BURNABY (CP) — The old war cry is echoing around the campus of Simon Fraser University: "If you're a woman you're a second-class citizen." Making the cry is the Women's Liberation Movement, headed by Dr. Margaret L. Benston, assistant professor in SFU's chemistry department. It claims 60 members on and off campus.

"It's come about," she says, "because women ... are meeting with discrimination; socially, legally, politically and economically they are made to feel inferior"

Inferior to whom? Men, of course, says Dr. Benston, but the WLM is "anxious not to take the same direction as some of the American groups, which have become violently anti-men."

The group wants to convince men that women aren't inferior. At the same time, says Dr. Benston, it also wants to convince women to "improve the conception women have of themselves."

Dr. Benston, a young, single blonde, explained:

"We really want women to recognize their potential, their true identity, and in that way to achieve the peace of mind which will enable them to exist under the present social system.

"We want to change the social order too, but we feel that by banding together we can achieve strength sufficient to accomplish our purpose without having to become aggressive and lose our femininity."

WLM members, she says, "have come to see that being a woman is not simply a matter of being a particular sex. Being a woman is a job. It's an economic category.

"There's a specific kind of work that women do. Women are people who take care of domestic duties, who give birth to and raise children.

"Their working conditions are bad. The hours are long. The pay is low. It's a very low-status job and it's work—real work. ...

"Those of us who are on campus get together and talk over our problems. And we've discovered that ... the forces which act against our best interests are all caused by the present social system."

What the group is attempting, said Dr. Benston, "is to understand women's roles, to try to improve the conception women have of themselves, as well as the conception men have of women."

WAYNE BROWN
. . . making mistakes that turn out

He Shaves Wood And Beer Foam

By ED GOULD

MAPLE BAY — For a beer slinger Wayne Brown is a heck of a wood carver. Or, for a wood carver, Wayne Brown is a heck of a beer slinger.

Either way, cutting animals from wood or shaving foam from a brew, the 25-year-old fourth-year psychology major from University of Victoria is making the most of his Sabbatical at Maple Bay.

Off the job of managing bar at Maple Bay Inn, Brown spends his time doodling in wood from materials drifted up on the beach or found lying in the fields. Grist for the mill could be the fence post you are standing beside.

The way Brown sees it, every piece of material has locked in it an artistic form crying to be let out. By chipping or carving away the excess surrounding, the carver releases the form so it can be identified by everyone.

A series of "mistakes that turned out rather well," is his description of some of his carvings now on view on the walls of the Inn.

The torch is used to char the wood and "raise" the grain. The object is then brushed to remove excess carbon and a special wax rubbed in to further highlight the texture of the wood.

He began carving while working in the Queen Charlotte Islands three years ago and since then he has spent about six hours a day at his hobby.

Although some artists go into a blue funk for days if they chip away too much or a section falls off that said the whole bit, Brown believes in letting the chips fall where they may.

Ladysmith Celebration Makes Profit

LADYSMITH — Despite overcast skies and drizzle, Ladysmith's 65th anniversary party over the weekend was rated a success by its promoters.

Oville Delcourt, co-chairman of the event sponsored by merchants and sports clubs, said today, "Rain Saturday and Sunday sent a few people home, but more came into town than went out.

One guest for certain was swept into town off his feet. Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney was forcibly removed from his office early Saturday morning by the notorious 49ers, Ladysmith's light-fingered fraternity of fellows.

David Savard, 14, beat out dozens of other youngsters by bouncing for six straight hours on a mattress to the accompaniment of rock music.

Allan Young, of Nanaimo, rocked to a winning time of 41 hours and won $74 in a rock-a-thon featuring rocking chairs.

A talent contest was won by Doug Simpson, nine, of Davis Road. He began taking lessons on the drums in December.

Delcourt said $1,000 profit was made on the Barbecue alone. Another $1,000 profit was made on a new concession stand. Proceeds are to be used for further development of Transfer Park with some set aside for next year's celebrations.

Coat of Arms Ceremony On Wednesday

DUNCAN — The city will officially receive its coat of arms Wednesday when Lt. Gov. John Nicholson conducts a presentation ceremony at City Hall.

Mayor Jim Quaife also will preside at the colorful event. Letters patent for the armorial bearings have been given by members of the family in memory of the late Dr. Henry Swan, a Cowichan valley physician and surgeon after the First World War.

The family includes his widow, Edna, sons Peter Swan, principal of St. Thomas More College, University of Saskatchewan, Dr. Conrad Swan, York Herald of Arms, and Lady Hilda Swan.

About 100 guests are expected at the ceremony at 2 p.m. which will be followed by a reception at the Tzouhalem Hotel.

Dr. Swan was born in Vancouver after the family moved from Poland. He died in 1963 at 71.

The coat of arms was designed by local artist Geraldine Weld of Khenipsen Road and was adapted by Conrad Swan.

The shield is silver with three Douglas Fir trees, golden cones, an antique crosscut saw, an ox's head and a salmon. The symbols represent lumber industry, the wealth, labors and natural sports of the area.

Poor Turnout Blamed On Press, Candidates

DUNCAN — The school board, press and candidates were blamed Monday night for the poor turnout in Saturday's Cowichan school board byelection.

Trustee Margaret Whittaker disagreed with chairman Bruce Devitt's statement that taxpayers are only interested in the board when money is involved.

Only 3.7 per cent of the eligible voters went to the polls.

Mrs. Whittaker told a board meeting: "What do you expect? There were no publicity releases by the candidates, no releases to the press by the board and no radio."

She said the press was to blame too because not enough was made of the "issues."

Devitt said there really were no issues involved in the byelection and that notices had been placed in newspapers and public announcements on radio.

"People shouldn't need to be led by the nose," he said. "There was plenty of information available if they wanted it. But if they want to bury their heads in the sand, the heck with them."

Trustee Kurt Horn said the onus should not be on the board to hold public meetings for every election.

Horn admitted, however, his wife called six people the day of the byelection and none knew about it.

Body Found

ALERT BAY (CP) — David Joseph, 20, was found dead lashed to a small boat in Cormorant Channel off the northeast coast of Vancouver Island Monday.

His brother Isaac was missing and presumed drowned. The two men were reported missing Saturday when they failed to return home to Alert Bay.

Chemainus Horsemen Club To Open Show Ring Sunday

NORTH COWICHAN — Chemainus Western Horsemen's Club will open its new show ring at Fuller Lake Park at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The show starts at 9 a.m. with a full program of English and Western Style classes officially licensed by the Canadian Horse Shows'Association.

English classes wil be held in the morning with hacks, hunters, novice and open jumpers, and Western trail horse, pleasure, stock and gymkhana events after the lunch break.

Karl Michel of Penticton will judge all events. Bill Smith will be ringmaster and Stan Green announcer. Entry secretary is Mrs. Valerie Hulford of Duncan.

Although official entries now have closed, post entries will be accepted with double fee up to one hour before post time.

The Green Lantern champion horse trophy will be at stake for the horse and rider with highest points for the day.

ENNALS NOMINATED

Ennals received 105 of 177 votes cast.

Ennals, Duncan born, ran for office twice in Oak Bay but was unsuccessful.

Bring the family. Spend an hour or two in the fascinating world in the depth of the ocean. And who knows, you just may be our 1,000,000th visitor. Good Luck!

UNDERSEA GARDENS, THE INNER HARBOUR

Exhibition On Theatre Restoration

LONDON (CP) — Viscount Norwich, author and former diplomat, hopes to mount an exhibition to mark the restoration of Toronto's Royal Alexandra Theatre next year at the British Theatre Museum in London's Kensington area.

As chairman of the tiny, privately-sponsored museum, he has written to Royal Alexandra owner Ed Mirvish, who saved the historic building from demolition. They will discuss the project when Norwich stops off in Toronto in September on his way to McMaster University in Hamilton, Ont., for a two-week lecture series.

Norwich first heard about the preservation scheme from a friend, Toronto architect Richard Robinow, who suggested the theatre has strong connections with British theatrical history.

"Many famous British actors and actresses played at the theatre during Canadian tours," said the 39-year-old Norwich in an interview.

MANY ARE DESTROYED

"It is as distinguished as any in Canada and we felt we should mark the preservation in some way. It is sad that so many fine old theatres, particularly in Britain are being demolished."

The exhibition will probably take the form of a selection of old posters, programs and costume and set designs, along with photographs showing the extent of the restoration work.

Censors Pass African Film Despite Clear Race Theme

CAPE TOWN (The Machester Guardian) — After agonizing deliberations, the South African censors have passed a controversial locally-made film with a racial theme.

The have ordered only 52 seconds of cuts in Katrina, the story of a colored woman trying to pass for white.

This is the first time a South African-made feature film has been made which throws whites and non-whites together in social and romatic relationships. Admittely, the players withdraw to their respective ethnic groups at the end of the film, and Katrina drowns herself. But in spite of this concession to South Africa's racial orientation, the film deals frankly and sensitively with the plight of "try-for-white" coloreds.

The South African version is bilingual (English and Afrikaans), but the producer, Emil Nofal, has made an all-English version for distribution overseas. He hopes to enter "Katrina" at the Cannes film festival.

Nofal's most recent film, The Candidate, dealt with the explosive subject of English-Afrikaans relations. It is the most sophisticated film ever made in South Africa.

One of the cuts ordered by the censors in "Katrina" is in a scene where Katrina's aged colored mother dies. The script, "She'll go to heaven . . . but she'll go through the back door", has been changed to "She'll go straight to heaven".

A reference to a colored person as a "second-class citizen" has been replaced by "a different person".

A fiery black preacher who speaks of "hatings and killings" and "burning and blooded", now speaks only of "hatings and killings".

A scene where three white youths beat up Katrina's son, and roll his body into the sea, has been cut to show only the assault.

Katrina has been granted a certificate for release to all races and all ages. Nofal has expressed "tremendous relief" at the decision. This is the first time the race issue has been put before South Africans in this form, and Nofal says he had feared that the film would be banned or cut beyond recognition.

Beach Guards To Start Duties

NORTH COWICHAN — Lifeguards will begin duties Saturday at Maple Bay, Crofton, Chemainus and Fuller Lake Park beaches, the municipality said today.

An additional guard is to relieve at all locations so that beaches will be serviced seven days a week.

Underground Film Evening May Bring Surprises

By JOHN DRISCOLL

An evening of underground films is like a blind date.

It may prove boring or filled with pleasant surprises. And you can't be sure until it's over whether it's been worth it.

Close to 200 people jammed into the art gallery Monday to watch nine short films distributed by Vancouver's Intermedia group.

Most of the films were financed independently by the young film makers.

Many of the films Monday contained an overdose of murky symbolism and all showed a lack of discipline in editing. But for those who attended there were several pleasant surprises.

All of the films were technically on a high level with some excellent photographic effects.

And while they may be short on continuity the young experimenters are long on imagination.

"Some of them are using techniques we'd never have dared to use," said Intermedia director Werner Aellan who was trained in more conventional film techniques with the National Film Board.

Aellan chose two of the best films to close the evening.

Vancouver poet Al Rizutis' Inauguration, given its Canadian premiere in Victoria was described by him as "a visual tapestry of life twisted and rearranged into abrasive and harmonic patterns"

Anti-War Plea

What came across was an anti-war statement, a beautifully photographed montage of pleasure, youth, decay, and destruction.

In David Rimmer's Migration the camera moves with blurring speed in an attempt to capture the rhythm of nature, death and rebirth. The 27-year-old Rimmer, a former economics student calls this, his third film, an energy film. The electronic background music is well suited to the style.

Other films included Arnold Saba's Euphoria, Peter Phase Two; Gordon Fidler's Bryant's Felix; Bill Fix's Underground; and Al Simm's cartoon.

Certainly the evening did much to bolster museum curator Colin Graham's claim that Vancouver "leads Canada and much of North American in experimental film-making."

Intermedia is sponsored by a Canada Council grant, and grants from industries and universities.

COWICHAN FOREST MUSEUM — "Best time we've had yet." This is the comment we often hear from vacationers stopping in to enjoy the attractions of this unique showplace. Here on beautifully timbered lakeside grounds is a display of rare old logging equipment that once harvested the resources of British Columbia's great forests. For those fond of the outdoors there are tree-lined paths showing the visitor the mysteries of woodland growth. You can enjoy the whole scene aboard a stout little steam train chugging around a narrow-gauge track. There is nothing stuffy about this museum, located on Highway No. 1, one mile north of Duncan. Youngsters have as much pleasure as their parents. Open daily 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Pulitzer Prize Winner Dead

Pegler won the Pulitzer Prize for reporting in 1941.

He moved to Southern Arizona in 1942, living quietly near Tucson.

His physician said he died of congestive heart failure. He had undergone surgery for a colon resection last Wednesday.

He donated some articles to various publications and continued his opinion column for King Features syndicate until Aug. 13, 1962, when they parted company because of "irreconcilable differences" after 18 years.

Pegler was 67 when he and his third wife, Maude Towart, 46, of Cannes, France, were married in 1961.

Although Pegler said he never joined the John Birch Society, an ultra-conservative political group, he contributed articles to its monthly magazine, American Opinion, until one was rejected in April, 1964.

Explained Pegler: "For some reason the founder (Robert Welch) killed my article. I had enough of that with Hearst. I don't have to take it any more."

EXPOSED RACKETEERING

Pegler won the Pulitzer Prize for his exposure of labor racketeering. He was best known, however, for his columns, many of which he wrote for the King Features Syndicate, owned by William Randolph Hearst.

His column also led to one of the most famous libel suits in American journalism in 1954 when he attacked reporter Quentin Reynolds in his column. Reynolds won the suit in a famous trial in which he was given the largest punitive award ever granted in a defamation suit, $175,000.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks for the many expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness extended to us in the sudden loss of our dear husband and father William, by Mr. Wm. Odgers and Mr. Alex Graham and others of the C.N. Telecommunications, Royal Jubilee Hospital Staff and Friends, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Middleton and Mrs. K. Baker, and Our Many Relatives and Friends in the City.
—Dorothy, Margaret and Martin Blitch.

9 IN MEMORIAM

DIXON—In loving memory of my dear husband (Isaiah), who passed away June 24, 1966.

There is no parting from those we love,
No distance can divide,
For each day in memory's garden
We still walk side by side.
Wherever life may take us,
Whatever we may do,
The memory of the years we shared
Will keep us close to you.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

We can think of a lot of old adages to fit today's hand. "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," perhaps, or "Don't count your chickens before they're hatched."

Opening lead—♠7

Returning to bridge we might point out that overtricks are nice in rubber bridge but declarer should concentrate on making his contract and that a finesse is never proven until the defender who may hold the key card has shown out of the suit.

We won't go into an analysis of West's choice of opening lead. Suffice to say that he decided to lead through dummy's spade rather than to attack declarer's diamonds. It turned out to be a very wise choice.

South played a low spade from dummy and East was in with the queen. He shifted to the four of hearts and South was in dummy. He considered leading a spade and giving up a second trick in that suit but decided that he had nothing to lose and a lot to gain by attacking diamonds. He played dummy's nine of that suit.

Much to South's surprise the nine held the trick. Now South was ready to go after an overtrick. The diamond finesse had worked once. It was sure to work again.

He led a second diamond. East showed out and West collected four diamond tricks and 100 points above the line. South collected some valuable experience.

BRIAN HOLLEY MOTORS

YOUR
WITH WORTHWHILE SAVINGS ON

IS

Most all American car dealers have BIG investments and require LARGE profits to offset their BIG overhead. Being an import dealer, our overhead is LOW - our profit margin SMALL — so we can easily sell American cars for less.

THAT'S THE WAY
IT IS

EXAMPLES

'67 FALCON Futura Sports Coupe, driven only 22,000 miles, V-8, 4-speed, custom radio, bucket seats, chrome reverse wheels, wide oval radial ply tires. A sharp car in every sense of the word.

Average Retail	$2895
OUR EVERY DAY PRICE	$2595
SAVE	$ 300

'65 OLDSMOBILE F-85. V-8, automatic, power steering, power brakes, radio. Low mileage, top condition.

Average Retail	$2095
OUR EVERY DAY PRICE	$1895
YOU SAVE	$ 200

'67 FAIRLANE 500 2-door hardtop, V-8, automatic, power steering, power brakes, radio, vinyl sports roof. A bargain if there ever was one.

Average Retail	$2595

Company Announces Growth Plan

McKay-Cormack Holdings Ltd. shareholders will be asked next month to change the name of the company, take over two private companies and increase capitalization.

In a notice of an extraordinary general meeting sent to shareholders today, board chairman Donald W. Low, of Vancouver, said approval would be sought July 7 at the Hotel Georgia for permission to negotiate purchase of all 20 issued shares of Van Tor Development Ltd. for 439,187 class B shares of McKay-Cormack.

He said similar approval would be sought to acquire 90 per cent of the 100 issued shares of Faith Insurance Agencies Ltd. for 29,250 class B shares of McKay-Cormack.

Valuation of the shares was put at $1 for purposes of the transaction.

BOTH PRIVATELY OWNED

Both of the companies sought are privately-held B.C. companies. McKay-Cormack's chief activity is its Victoria shipyard.

It is proposed to change the name of the holding company to International Industrial Dynamics Ltd., pending approval of the registrar of companies.

McKay-Cormack is authorized to issue 175,000 class B shares of $1 nominal value. It is proposed to increase capitalization to 3 million class B without nominal value but of a maximum price of $2.

There are 100,000 class A shares with a nominal value of $9.65, which normally carry no voting rights.

Because no dividends have been paid on these shares for three years, class A shareholders are entitled to vote at the extraordinary general meeting.

Currently, there are 84,574 A shares and 164,614 B shares issued. More than 10 per cent of the voting rights of the two classes of shares are held jointly by Donald Low and Robert A. Bennett, a total of 83,000 class B.

The meeting will be asked to confirm the addition of three persons to the board of directors: Bennett, Low and Edgar C. Robinson, all Vancouver businessmen.

Legal Fees For Producer Collected

TORONTO (CP) — Well-wishers Monday raised about half the estimated legal expenses for the director and producers of the controversial play Futz, who are to be tried Wednesday on charges of presenting an immoral performance.

About 300 persons, at $5 each, turned up at an old converted theatre. Others contributed $1,000 in proxy tickets.

Before the Magistrate

A 13-year-old boy's testimony was accepted Monday in central court that his mother had been stabbed and beaten by his stepfather.

Frank Tamok, no address available, was remanded Monday for pre-sentence report after he was convicted of assault causing bodily harm, despite Mrs. Elizabeth Tamok's denials that he had done anything but push her.

The incident took place, June 7 court was told, after the Tamoks had argued over money and her having left him for several days.

They had arranged to meet in Central Park to talk, and while there Tamok stabbed his wife twice with a small penknife and punched her, the young boy testified.

RAN FROM PARK

Mrs. Tamok ran from the park, and when Tamok tried to follow her, his stepson kicked him to allow his mother a head start.

She ran across Quadra Street to a gas station, where Tamok caught her and pushed her against a car fender with such force the fender was dented, court was told.

Two witnesses to the scuffle, one a pasing motorist, the other a service station attendant, told court they had seen Tamok punch his wife.

Called as a defence witness by Tamok, Mrs. Tamok denied that her husband had beaten or stabbed her, and said that her earlier statement to police was not true and had been made up because she was "nervous."

In the statement, she had said her husband told her "Come home with me or I'm going to stab you right through the heart."

Magistrate William Ostler said he did not believe Tamok or Mrs. Tamok, and that their son's evidence was supported completely by the testimony of two impartial witnesses to the quarrel.

Stephen Prescott, 17, 4032 Hollydene, pleaded guilty to five counts of theft under $50 and was remanded to Wednesday for sentence.

He had earlier said he was possibly responsible for another 40 cases of minor theft over the last three years, all of them taking place at the University of Victoria, court was told.

Prescott told police whenever he was broke, he would go to the university, which is near his home, and help himself to whatever he could find in the buildings, Saanich juvenile detective David Anderson told the court.

The five offences to which he pleaded guilty occurred between April and June.

Rodrique J. Lavoie, no fixed address, was sentenced to three months for taking an auto without the owner's consent.

He had just been released from a forestry camp prison Friday, the day before the offence took place, and told the court he was under the influence of alcohol at the time.

Ronald B. Sauve, 2614 Avebury, was fined $50 for common assault. He punched a drinking companion in the face because he felt the man was not paying his share.

Donald H. D. Nikirk was sentenced to 18 months for a total of 16 charges of false pretences and fraud. Court was told he has a record of similar offences back to 1960, and he is now serving a sentence for an earlier charge.

The offences took place in Vancouver, Nanaimo, and Golden over the past few months.

The trial of Gregory P. Vaupotic, 611 Mary, who is charged with possession of a narcotic, will continue Monday, allowing more research to be done into the case.

Sharp's Nordic Tour Flayed by Stanfield

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Back in the Commons after an 11-day Scandinavian tour, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp was greeted Monday with one of the most searing blasts yet unleashed by Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

After delivering a four-page report on his tour, the external affairs minister was told by the Conservative leader that he couldn't decide whether Mr. Sharp "is more to be pitied than laughed at, or more to be laughed at than pitied."

"I think it would be safe to say that no Canadian minister has been the object of such derision internationally since the prime minister came back from London," said Mr. Stanfield.

Mr. Sharp, who visited Oslo, Reykjavik, Helsinki, Copenhagen and Stockholm, told the Commons that the purpose of his tour "was to reaffirm on a personal basis the longstanding good relations between the Canadian and Nordic governments. . . ."

Mr. Stanfield said "the purpose of the minister's trip is incomprehensible."

But later the Conservative Leader said it seems clear that the real reason for the trip was for Mr. Sharp to be involved in "what he thought was the successful conclusion of the talks between Canadian diplomats and representatives of the Peking government."

TALKS IN SWEDEN

The talks between Canada and Communist China on the question of diplomatic recognition are being held in Stockholm.

"The minister was going to jump on the bandwagon just as it came into public view.

"The minister's eagerness was equalled only by the ambassador's indifference. If the minister met anyone at all, it was strictly accidental."

Low-Rental High-Rise Plan Attracts Senior Citizens

Some of Victoria's senior citizens have already inquired about accommodation in a new lower-rent high-rise apartment to be built in the James Bay area at the corner of Croft and Menzies.

Bachelor suites in the high-rise will be rented from about $84 to $97 a month and one-bedroom suites from $92 to $123.

"Many senior citizens receiving between $200 and $250 from pensions and investments will just be able to afford these rents," said Catherine Horne, executive director of Victoria Silver Threads Service.

"We have to consider members in this higher income group as well as the many in a lower group. The high-rise rentals may sound high, but in the light of today's rental scale they are not really out of line.

"Many of our members can afford them and our experience shows that most elderly people enjoy better health with proper heating and comfortable accommodation."

The new high-rise will have 19 storeys and will be located near Simcoe and Niagara. It will be built by Westsea Construction Ltd. of Vancouver.

The first floor will be occupied by stores, including a supermarket.

"This will be particularly beneficial to oldtimers during bad weather," Mrs. Horne said.

The top 17 floors will contain 307 bachelor and one-bedroom suites.

The $4,000,000 high-rise will not be directly subsidized, but the builders will qualify for an outright federal government loan of 90 per cent of the cost of construction.

Home Wrecked In Suicide Blast

OXFORD, England (AP) — A 39-year-old former commando blew himself and his family home to pieces today, severely injuring his wife and two of their seven children.

Police identified the dead man as Michael Molloy, an Irish-born demolition expert and former Royal Marine. They said he called them after a family argument and told them what he planned to do.

A squad car hurried to his home but police said Molloy was not there. A guard was posted at the house, and Molloy returned shortly after 1 a.m. carrying a box he said was filled with gelignite, an explosive.

He told police he would detonate the explosive if they did not move before he counted to 10. At the count of six, the policeman moved back and Molloy went into the house.

"There'd been an argument early on," said Harry Ellis, a neighbor. "Later I saw his van drive up. He shouted something to the police. I knew he dealt with explosives.

"He went into the house and there was a terrific bang and a big flash. I didn't stop to see any more. I rushed to get my wife and kids out.

"Some of his children were blown out of the house into the front garden."

Police and firemen pulled the seven children from the rubble. All suffered injuries, but only two were described as badly hurt. Mrs. Molloy also was severely injured, police said.

The blast destroyed the Molloy home and set fire to an adjoining house.

Seal-Hunting Scored

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals said Monday it has sent a letter likening seal hunting to the great buffalo hunts of the previous century to all members of the Commons committee on fisheries and to all B.C. members of Parliament. Society director Francis J. Jones said in the letter there "cannot be an argument made on 'economic grounds'" for seal hunting.

Confidence in Gov't Could Rescue Franc

By HOBART ROWEN
The Washington Post

PARIS — A high French official said in an exclusive interview Sunday that "it will be difficult to avoid devaluation of the franc," unless there is "a quick restoration of confidence in the government's ability to control prices."

This problem is now the primary concern of Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who was named Sunday as finance minister of the government of President Georges Pompidou.

Whether Giscard—who is regarded in France as a right-wing, ultra conservative—can restore that internal confidence is an open question. He takes the job, apparently, as Pompidou's second choice.

SAVE FRANC

The new president had initially preferred Antoine Pinay for the post. Pinay is credited with saving the franc twice before and thus would have been the best symbol that the new French government intended to establish whatever controls necessary to prevent a devaluation.

It is understood that Pinay insisted on such tough financial stabilization measures that Pompidou could not accept them.

And while an associate of Giscard mentioned among his credentials his success in quieting down the inflationary French economy in 1963, others suggest that Giscard's tactics helped to bring the nation to near-revolution in 1968.

The severity of the economic problem now facing Giscard is not under-rated here. "French people are scared to death of a devaluation," the high source said. "And they are scared that prices will continue to rise."

Consumer buying in France has rocketed and helped to create a balance of payments deficit and a steady decline in France's enormous reserves of gold and foreign exchange currency.

Frenchmen Are Left Speechless By Scandalous Telephone System

By CY FOX

PARIS (CP) — Anyone picking up the telephone in France is instantly plugged into one of this country's most pressing problems—the phone system itself.

Some Frenchmen call it scandalous, others endlessly joke about it and a number warn that it constitutes a major hindrance to the country's efforts at self-modernization.

There is an even more unnerving consideration, that of the safety of residents in remote areas.

Efforts to ring through a fire alarm in the Breton village of Coetlogon bogged down for lack of an automatic exchange, and five buildings were destroyed.

Complaints about the national phone system were being voiced well before the 1958 assumption of power by Charles de Gaulle.

And all major candidates in this year's presidential elections pledged efforts to improve the situation.

But the apparent backwardness of the telephone network compared with obviously major progress being made by France in other utility fields—roads, for instance—keeps nagging the population as only an everyday inconvenience can.

An American economic specialist told of a wealthy compatriot's plans for establishing a mutual-funds business in this country.

But this line of commerce depends heavily on phone calls and one taste of communications here was enough to influence the financier into choosing Britain, instead, for his European outlet.

Phone problems in Britain too are legion, but critics of the French situation insist that their neighbors across the Channel can at least boast of a system 96 per cent automatic while in France the percentage is 72. And these Frenchmen add that the basic cost rate for phone calls is almost three times higher here.

One explanation offered for France's telephonic troubles is that the phone system has been sacrificed to the needs of efficient mail delivery.

MAIL IS FAST

The mail in Paris is fast and frequent, with as many as three household deliveries a day.

The famous "pneumatique" —swift transmission of specially stamped letters by compressed-air tube—is one of the wonders of Paris for foreigners.

The mail and phone systems both are run by the ministry of posts and telecommunications which also includes a savings bank and a money-orders system among its services.

During the presidential campaign, Communist Jacques Duclos urged that some of the funds currently channelled into the post office financial services should go to help telephone modernization, a step already taken in West Germany and Switzerland.

Another suggestion is that telephone operations should be put under separate management within the post office or be made an autonomous, publicly owned corporation.

Customer complaints against the present state of affairs include allegations of long delays before installation of requested phones.

A critic from the non-Communist left charged that the average delay is three years.

BOARD SATURATED

He added that the central switchboard in the community of Annecy has been "saturated" with lines since 1954 and overloading of the central facility in Tours is sufficiently serious to be a fire hazard.

In the Pas de Calais area, with 1,400,000 inhabitants, the proportion of phones to human beings is said to be three to every 100.

Farmers in at least two agricultural areas elsewhere are described as losing foreign orders for fruit, because of poor phone communications in their regions.

Critics say 6.7 per cent of France's population are phone subscribers whereas the figure is 45 per cent in Sweden and 13 in Britain.

VOICE QUALITY BAD

In Paris, however, the present system has facets which, to a foreigner, seem exotic.

Long-distance calls involve subjection to a variety of musical tones, depending on the area being dialled. A call across the Channel is preceded by a refrain reminiscent of the climactic theme in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Then there are the phone books—three sets of them. One set lists Paris subscribers alphabetically, another by street, a third by profession.

But even in the capital, voice quality is sometimes bad, especially for a non-Frenchman strained to understand the language in its speedily spoken form.

Linked to arguments for faster modernization of equipment are assertions that at present the French phone system is slow to avail itself of technical innovations made in other countries and pays too much for them once they are finally introduced here.

INDIA STUDENTS REBUILD NATION

BOMBAY (CP) — The Indian government has launched a scheme for student participation in national reconstruction.

Conceived mainly as an answer to student unrest and youth frustrations, the scheme aims at involving more than 200,000 college students in nation-building work in their spare time.

Members of the National Service Corps for College Youth will participate in rural literacy drives, build irrigation channels and school houses, popularize family planning in towns and villages and help over-worked doctors and nurses in hospitals.

Federal Education Minister Vijayendra Rao wants the country's 70 universities and 3,000 colleges to join the campaign. If the students make up their mind, he said, they can bring about "miracles of development."

He has asked colleges and university departments to "adopt" villages, slum areas and tribal pockets and then go on to develop them on modern lines.

The Indian government hopes the National Service Corps will help keep students occupied and give them a sense of social obligation.

Piano, Voice Dominate Recital

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Pianists far outnumbered other instrumentalists in Victoria Conservatory of Music's final student recital presented in the McPherson Playhouse Sunday afternoon.

Wendy Stofer launched the program in fine style with a beautifully rhythmic, assured performance of the first movement of Haydn's Sonata in F and Carrie Humpherys closed the first half with two fascinatingly different Lennox Berkeley preludes.

Ronald Pettapiece made a fine job of "Parade" by Poole and two charming Scriabin Preludes were introduced by Irene Baird.

With deft skill and careful control, Heline Barker played Chopin's Mazurka in C, a piece a little beyond her full comprehension at present.

VARIETY ADDED

Vocalists at various stages of development added variety. Laura Gross sang "Tell Me, Lovely Shepherd" delightfully though her second song was not completely within her present scope. "Dream Angus" was sung with commendable control by Linda Scanlon who managed to create an atmosphere of Scottish simplicity by her sweet unaccompanied singing.

A well-blended vocal ensemble conducted by Miss Pearcey sang two choral numbers. Arne's "Mists before the Sunrise Fly" showed to advantage their good tone, breath control and fine diction but the somewhat over-sophisticated setting of "All Through the Night" was not quite as successful. Two contrasted duets recognizable Purcell, were sung by Norma Selwood and Barbara Ebell in the final vocal contribution.

GOOD SENSE

A good sense of rhythm, some rich lower tones and sustained lines marked Gary Russell's cello solos and Joyce Menting achieved considerable success with the rather difficult Rondo from Breval's Sonata in C. Sandra Pumphrey's oboe solo and Brian Titus' flute pieces showed two promising instrumentalists.

Joyce Menting and Gary Russell — cello.

Linda Scanlon, Laura Gross, Norma Selwood and Barbara Ebell — voice.

Plenty To Beef About!

Just about the swingiest party ever held at Goldstream Park took place Sunday when approximately 500 ex-Calgarians turned out for a steak barbecue picnic.

George Laak, president of the Ex-Calgary Club, reports that Ernie Dean and his committee cooked about 400 steaks to perfection in the outdoor barbecue pits.

The 300-member club also received a boost in numbers, as well as morale. Joe Dunbeck and Don Herron signed up an extra 100 members at the club's second annual get-together.

Paul Rowe, former football star with the Calgary Stampeders and a member of the Hall of Fame, was on hand to organize the sports, which included a baseball game, horse-shoe pitching, relay racing and races for every age.

Laak estimates that about 150 children attended.

City Veteran Taken Sick On Flight

A plane chartered by 151 West Coast veterans was forced to make an unscheduled stop on its way to London Sunday when a Victoria passenger had difficulty breathing.

Harold Gulston, 73, of 307-1343 Harrison, who suffers from the lung condition emphysema, was given oxygen until the plane made an unscheduled stop at Scotland'a Prestwick Airport.

A doctor there declared him fit to continue to London and recommended continued use of oxygen.

Air Canada officials said the plane was carrying a group of 151 members of the Vancouver-based Pacific Coast Command of the Royal Canadian Legion on the start of a two-month trip to Europe.

HOME GARDEN

Happiness Is Raw Foods

By HILDA BEASTALL

Happiness just now is green peas so fresh from the vines that their color rivals anything out of Ireland. Happiness is also the brightest of scarlet radishes on a bed of creamy green Buttercrunch lettuce, with white crisp onions and whole small carrots to crunch—enough to drive the aesthetic listener away from the table.

Hilda

Well, hot days are for raw foods from the garden plot and we're so lucky to have them to enjoy.

Now we're looking forward to the first green and wax beans, sweet corn and tomatoes.

As the corn stalks grow, we notice a few side shoots coming at ground level. They may be carefully nipped out, but it is not necessary. Some folks boil them for a vegetable if gathered when tender.

As the spikes of flowers appear at the tops of corn plants, watering overhead must cease, or the pollen will be spoiled and the silks on the tassels below will not be pollinated. Water only at the roots, by hand, during the period of pollination.

Every day or two, staking varieties of tomatoes should be gone over to rub out the tiny side shoots as they grow. Notice the lovely tomato smell already.

Add another tie whenever necessary, for when these varieties become laden with fruit, the single stem needs support or it will break.

Bush kinds of tomatoes can branch freely, and only reach 12 or 14 inches in height. They may be 24 inches across and will bear quantities of fruit without support.

Both pea and bean plants need moisture in the soil to keep them growing. When pods form, they need even more.

SAMPSON-LIKE, railway buff Tom Dugelby stands between two old steam locomotives he hopes to incorporate in a transportation museum in Toronto. The museum, which would feature old cars, carriages and aircraft, would be established on a 300-acre meadow on the outskirts of Toronto. Locomotives shown here are in Mississauga, Ont., Dugelby's home town.

Toy Fads May Come and Go, But Makers Go on For Ever

TORONTO (CP) — Mannie Grossman started playing with toys when he was a kid and he hasn't stopped yet.

But now—as president of Reliable Toy Co. Ltd.—it's a different kind of game. He is responsible for more than 200 different kinds of dolls plus the hundreds of new "fad toys" that come and go each year.

A small man with silver hair, pink complexion and light blue eyes, Mr. Grossman fits his job.

He started with Reliable when he was 16 as supervisor of a 1934 Reliable doll construction crew. He worked his way up through the company and took over the presidency in 1966.

"Toymakers would starve if they had to depend on what was spent on toys for me as a kid," he recalled in an interview.

"But perhaps in those days, life was different, we occupied ourselves with different things. If we got one or two toys a year, we thought that was fine, but today a child wants practically everything he sees.

IMPULSIVE BUYERS

"Today's parent is inclined to buy his child toys 'as pacifiers.' Some toys are status symbols and a lot are bought on impulse."

Mr. Grossman says fad toys come and go, as fad fashions come and go, but basic toys like baby dolls will go on forever. Little girls always want to imitate the way their mother takes care of her baby.

"These are basic things that will never really die out because they leave a lot to the imagination of the child."

Reliable makes more than 200 lines of dolls, besides special orders for mail and chain stores. Mr. Grossman says there are few real new toys produced, just endless possibilities on the same basic themes.

For example, in 1967 Reliable took an ordinary baby doll and put it in a carrier, like the kind babies use in cars. The result was the sale of 114,000 Baby Carrie dolls in three months.

NOT ALL DOLLS

Dolls, however, comprise only one-quarter of the total number of Reliable's toys. These range from skipping ropes to inflatable swimming pools, croquet sets, pedal tractors and rocking horses, tea sets and darts.

Mr. Grossman says the biggest new theme in toys is wild colors. Most new items come in hot purple, fuchsia and lime, colors unheard of in toys a few years ago.

Mr. Grossman crosses the world to keep up with the toy scene. He has just returned from Australia, Hong Kong and Tokyo.

His newest line is called Swing-It, which Reliable hopes will be more successful than the Hula Hoop or last season's big seller, the foot toy Skip It.

The new toy consists of a length of cord with a polyethylene ball at each end and a hand grip in the middle. The trick is to swing the balls counter to each other without a collision.

The idea came from a retired naval officer. Mr. Grossman says he gets a lot of ideas that way.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Laura Secord Hiked To Warn British

By BOB BOWMAN

This is Laura Secord's day in Canadian history and there is a good deal of confusion about her achievement. Some historyans say she walked through the woods all night to warn the British of an American attack.

Bowman

However, it was mostly a daytime walk of 19 miles from Queenston to Beaver Dam on the Niagara peninsula.

In June 1813 the tide began to turn against the Americans who had invaded Canada. General Vincent at Burlington, reinforced by the 104th Regiment that had come all the way from New Brunswick after marching across Maine in winter, sent troops to Beaver Dam to prepare for an attack on the Americans at Queenston.

Laura Secord and her husband lived at Queenston, but he had been wounded in the fighting there and could not leave their home. Laura heard some American officers talking about an attack they were going to make on Beaver Dam and she and her husband felt that the Brisish must be warned.

As Mr. Secord could not go, Laura decided to make the trip alone. She left home early on the morning on June 23 carrying a milking stool to give the impression that she was going to milk the cows.

As soon as she was out of sight, she entered the woods and began the long walk to Beaver Dam using rough trails. It was a frightening experience for her, and she did not get to Beaver Dam until the next day.

On one occasion she was suddenly surrounded by a band of whooping Indians, but they let her go when she told them that the "Long Knives" were coming and she was going to warn the British. Actually the Indians were waiting for the attack.

When Laura got to Beaver Dam she told her story to Lieutenant Fitzgibbon who, years later, was in charge of the militia in Toronto when the W. L. Mackenzie rebellion was crushed.

The British already knew that the Americans were planning to attack Beaver Dam, but Laura Secord's bravery was recognized, and she has gone down in history as one of Canada's heroines.

Other events on June 24:

1534 — Cartier discovered Prince Edward Island.

1604 — De Monts named St. John River.

1610 — Henry Hudson entered strait now called after him.

1829 — McGill University was opened.

1880 — Music of "O Canada" was first played at Quebec

1910 — Gold was discovered near Stewart, B.C.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Teresa Cavander, age 12, of Dunbar, West Virginia, for her question:

How long must light travel from the nearest star?

Strictly speaking, of course, our sun is as starry as any star in the heavens. But as a rule we do not count it when we think of star distances. If we did, we would say that it is merely light minutes away. Each sunbeam takes about eight minutes to travel the 93 million miles from the surface of the sun to the earth.

Let's discount our starry sun and think of the stars that shine after it sets. On a clear night, some of them look almost close enough for a—tall person to reach up and touch. But of course they are vast distances away. And what we see is their light which has traveled across vast reaches of space. The average speed of light is 186,000 miles per second, which means that starlight travels more than 6,669 million miles each and every hour. Clocking distance and travel time is no surprise to us. We do it with a car speedometer that reports how many miles we are traveling per hour.

However, this speed in terms of miles per hour is much to puny to figure the distance of the stars. Astronomers use several whopping units for measuring the immensity of celestial distance. One is the light-year, the distance that light travels in one earth year. This distance is roughly six million-million earth miles—which is figure six plus twelve zeroes. The light-year is just fine for measuring the distances of the nearest stars—that is, those nearest to our starry sun.

The famous star Alpha Centauri shines bright in the skies below the equator, quite near to the South Cross. Sometimes it can be seen as far north as Florida and southern Texas. Actually, Alpha Centauri is a double star though you need a telescope to show that it is really two close stars orbiting around each other. For a long time, Alpha Centauri was rated as the sun's nearest neighbor. It is at a distance of 4.4. light years. This means its twinkling light that reaches the earth set forth towards us about four years and five months ago.

Bright Star

Some years ago, astronomers discovered that this star is really triplets. A small red dwarf star is orbiting the bright twins in the centre. As it orbits around, it changes positions in relation to the earth. At present it happens to be closer to us than Alpha Centauri. It was named Proxima, the near one, but it is too small to be seen without a telescope. Its light is captured on telescopic plates. And this light traveled a little less than 4.4. years before it arrived on earth to take its own photograph.

Light from most stars travels hundreds of years and sometimes thousands of years to reach the earth. This means that their twinkling beams started forth a long, long time ago. And what we see are the stars as they then were. If, in the meantime, the stars change, we must wait for light to bring us the news.

Many stars are 300 light-years away—a moderate celestial distance of 300 times six million-million earth miles. Suppose one of them exploded this afternoon and became a dazzling nova. We would not see the dramatic event from the earth until the year 2269. Our brightest star is Sirius. When we see it in the winter sky we are seeing it as it was 8.6 years ago. Its light, traveling at 186,000 miles per second, takes more than eight and a half years to reach us.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Diana Knott, age 12, of Gaston, Indiana, for her question:

Are kiwis like other kinds of birds?

This drab little bird resembles a sorry-looking chicken with an extra-long bill, no wings and no tail. He is quite unlike other birds. You might mistake his long, hairy feathers for a coat of shaggy fur, and if you look closely, you would see a pair of nostrils near the end of his thin, curved beak. He waddles along on huge feet with his nose to the ground, sniffing for bugs and wormy grubs in the soil.

The kiwis belong to the ratite group of flightless birds. They are distantly related to the ostrich and more closely related to the huge moa birds that once enjoyed life on the islands of New Zealand. For a time, the little kiwis were threatened with extinction and they are still very rare. They were hunted without mercy because their soft, long feathers made excellent trout-flies for fishermen. Then they had to cope with weasel-type animals imported to keep down the rabbit population and with mankind's prowling cats and dogs.

Sewage Treatment Plant Ordered for Clover Point

Deadline Near—Jam Here

By STEVE HUME

Take one testing station, one government deadline, some official statistics and thousands of untested cars—it all adds up to a tight squeeze.

With time rapidly running out on the provincial government's announced and according to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson inflexible deadline of July for all untested cars, Victoria and district drivers are scrambling to get their stickers of certification.

But calculating from figures released by the government recently, it may be impossible for the testing station at McKenzie Avenue to handle all the cars left in the five testing days remaining.

On Monday Peterson said that up to the end of May 67,279 of an estimated 80,000 vehicles registered in the Greater Victoria area had gone through the tests at the station and had been approved.

He said the station "has not been too busy lately."

LAST FEW DAYS

That leaves roughly 12,721 vehicles still not approved, give or take a few thousand that may have gone through in the last few days.

But motor vehicle branch officials say the station can handle a total of 750 cars a day, provided they don't all come at peak hours.

Even if the station could

McMicking Point Also Affected

By JOHN DRISCOLL

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark today flatly turned down a request that Victoria's raw sewage be dumped into the sea at Clover and McMicking Points.

Loffmark in April permitted a $1.5 million extension to the Macaulay Point sewer outfall in Saanich to disgorge 12 million gallons of sewage daily, 4,800 feet out into Juan de Fuca Strait.

LOFFMARK
. . . vetoes request

But he refused to listen to the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health proposal for outfalls in Oak Bay and Victoria, unless primary sewage treatment plants are provided.

The two plants would cost an estimated $6 million.

In a letter, health board chairman Roy Elphick asked Loffmark for "urgent consideration of this most vital problem.

"It has been pointed out that there exists no conclusive medical, scientific, or engineering proof to either support or refute the necessity for primary sewage treatment," said Elphick in the application which followed a June 10 health board meeting.

"In fact the Sanitary Sewerage Study of the Greater Victoria Area has suggested the extension of the outfalls alone would be sufficient."

SEWER PROJECT

The 1966 study, commissioned by the Greater Victoria Regional Board called for a $23,5 million sewer project, but did not include any primary treatment plants.

In his reply to the health board, Loffmark merely pointed to the provincial Pollution Control Board policy of requiring the inclusion of treatment facilities in the proposed sewer reconstruction project.

Loffmark also included a press release of September, 1968, in which he stated his concern over the protection of public health due to the rapid increase of contamination of beaches in many areas of British Columbia because of raw sewage.

Elphick, an Esquimalt alderman, said today he is disappointed with Loffmark's decision.

Building treatment facilities is "uneconomical," he said.

"Why do they have a study drawn up in the first place if they aren't going to follow it?" he asked, referring to the 1966 report.

TREATMENT COSTS

"It seems Loffmark isn't concerned with costs. These treatment plants could cost billions."

"I speak for myself and the Metropolitan Board of Health and other local leaders when I say that the government should at least try extended outfalls first. If they aren't effective we

Fire Halts Missile Program

By BOB HORTON

WASHINGTON (AP)—United States nuclear missile production has been halted for perhaps the rest of this year because of a crippling fire at an Atomic Energy Commission plant.

Government sources also give strong indications that testing of Safeguard anti-missile warheads may be delayed by the blaze that hit a plutonium-handling facility at Rocky Flats, Colo., May 11. The official AEC position is that Safeguard deployment schedules will not be set back.

The impact of the fire, first serious blaze at an AEC plant, was laid before Congress behind closed doors nine days later when AEC leaders asked for $45,000,000 to make repairs.

Most nuclear weapons require plutonium to trigger their atomic warheads.

Dutch Water Supply Hit by Nerve Poison

THE HAGUE (CP-Reuters)—Four major Dutch cities switched to emergency water supplies today after a mysterious poison—believed here to be a form of nerve gas used in making insecticides in West Germany—killed millions of fish in the big River Rhine.

Dutch government officials warned city residents and farmers not to use water originating from the river for any purpose and Dutch analysts were attempting to identify the poison.

One report said some 40,000,000 fish in 250 miles of the Rhine between Mainz and Emmerich, West Germany, were killed by the chemical.

In Dusseldorf, an official of the West German state of Westphalia said the poison is a chemical which affects the respiration of fish. He said there have been no reports that it can harm humans.

George Haeringer, official of the Westphalian ministry of agriculture, which is in charge of river protection, said one of 1,000 poisons could have killed the fish.

He said despite the fact that humans may have not been reported affected, precautions against this possibility have been taken along the Rhine's banks. Campers and barge crews were warned not to use the water for any purpose. West German experts had not yet been able to identify the poison.

The poison reached the Dutch frontier Monday night. It was detected when masses of dead fish floated down the Rhine into Holland from West Germany.

Barge skippers were placed on the alert to the hazard and farmers along the river were advised to call in their cattle.

The cities of Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Dordrecht and The Hague all started to use reserve water supplies.

The Dutch news agency quoted a German Rhineland radio station as saying authorities of the West German province of Westphalia had taken similar measures.

Holland's ministry of transport and waterways said it was warned of the Rhine's pollution during normal contacts with border authorities.

NOT IDENTIFIED

The German warning of a poisonous patch in the river had not specified the nature of the pollution, the Dutch ministry added.

Campers on the Rhine's banks at Duesseldorf were warned by West German authorities Monday not to use the river for cooking, swimming or camping after the poison killed tons of fish during the weekend.

At that time, chemists were said to have been unable to identify the poison. But tests showed the chemical caused extensive damage to the nervous system of the fish.

Dr. K. C. Zijlstra, director of the Dutch state institute for the purification of waste water, said he had been in touch with the German authorities but had not been informed of the type of poison discovered.

A ministry of transport and waterways spokesman said Dr. Zijlstra had expressed surprise that the poison, if unidentified, had still not been analysed in Germany.

Dutch health authorities said fish which had been examined bled at the gills and had intestinal infection.

The poisoned area of river water is expected to flow out into the North Sea in about two days, Dutch officials said.

AIR DUEL FOLLOWS RAID

Israel and Egypt fought an air battle over the Suez Canal today following an early-morning commando raid across the canal by Egyptians and the sabotage of an oil pipeline in Haifa, Israel's main port.

Israel claimed its planes shot down an Egyptian MiG-21 in the air battle about 20 miles south of the town of Suez. An army spokesman in Tel Aviv said the MiG was seen exploding over Egyptian territory. All Israei aircraft returned safely, he said.

Egypt, however, said its planes shot down an Israeli aircraft, seen falling in the Gulf of Suez.

NEW TAX CLIPS MAY REACH HAIR

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal and provincial governments are looking longingly at yet another new tax field—a hidden sales tax on services.

But, mercifully for the taxpayer, they haven't yet found away to get around all the difficulties.

What might be taxed are haircuts and beauty treatments, auto repairs and the like.

Papers presented by the federal government to the constitutional conference of provincial premiers earlier this month said more needs to be known about the service industries before tax laws can be written to cover them. The papers were tabled in the Commons Monday by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Federal and provincial officials are being told to work out the details of how a provincial indirect commodity sales tax could be applied.

The federal papers said Ottawa is willing to let the provinces impose indirect sales taxes as well as direct taxes, if two important conditions are met.

They must not impede interprovincial or international commerce, and they must not spill over from one province into another.

Officials said there is nothing in the plan to prevent a province from applying both direct and indirect sales taxes.

Direct sales taxes, ranging from five to eight per cent of each retail sale, now are applied by all provinces except Alberta. An indirect tax would be levied on the retailer as a percentage of his gross sales.

The new indirect sales tax would be applied initially only to goods or commodities, and probably with the same exceptions of foods, drugs and some clothing as prevail for the direct sales tax.

But the extension of sales tax to services generally may be the next step. Some taxes now are levied on telephone services, for example.

Hanoi Flatly Rejects Deal With Saigon

By MURREY MARDER
The Washington Post

PARIS — North Vietnam's chief strategist in Paris rejects in advance any compromise with the Saigon regime for using a mixed commission of Communists and non-Communists to organize a special election to decide South Vietnam's political fate.

Flat opposition to any form of compromise involving the present government in Saigon—on which the Nixon administration has pinned its hopes for a diplomatic settlement of the war—was expressed by Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho.

In an interview with the Washington Post, Tho equally ruled out any form of international supervision or participation in an election test in South Vietnam. He similarly brushed aside any prospect for formal or tacit agreement to reduce the level of fighting as long as the Nixon administration tries "to proceed from a position of strength" to end the war.

The harshest language was aimed at President Nixon personally.

Mr. Nixon's "personality" and his deeds since he has been in office, said Tho, have revealed a "warlike nature" which has produced a policy reflecting "the most warlike military circles in the United States."

TIME RUNNING OUT

Tho said that in the five months since President Nixon has been in office, he has engaged in "futile ... manoeuvres" that "can be compared to building castles in the air."

Now time is running out on President Nixon, said Tho:

"Mr. Nixon finds himself in a vicious circle. He wants to withdraw U.S. forces from South Vietnam but he fears that the puppet army and the puppet administration will collapse. But if Mr. Nixon is determined to pursue the war, U.S. casualties will increase . . .

"The intention of Mr. Nixon is to stay in Vietnam in order to build up the puppet army and administration that will permit the prolongation of the war. But I think that time is not on the side of Mr. Nixon.

"Now . . . what has Mr. Nixon been able to achieve in his last five months at the conference table? We may say that he has achieved nothing."

The essence of Tho's attack has been reverberating for some weeks here across the conference table. But what Tho added to it was a highly personal attack from the leading Communist policy-maker on this scene who is one of the highest ranking colleagues of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh and a veteran revolutionary whose words carry special weight in Hanoi.

PRESSURE OF DISSENT

Tho's evident objective was to maximize the pressures of American dissent and war frustration mounting on the Nixon administration, to put pressure upon Washington to accept the Viet Cong-North Vietnam 10-point plan for ending the war—most especially, to abandon the present South Vietnamese regime.

The thrust of Tho's remarks was intended to show no ray of hope, no way around yielding to the demands on the Communist side.

Will Probe Charges

TORONTO (CP) — A hearing July 8 will probe charges by the Ontario Securities Commission that Victoria Wood Development Corp. Ltd., filed a false and misleading certificate in its prospectus when it offered $4,800,000 worth of shares for sale.

Charges were also laid against the parent company, Revenue Properties Co. Ltd., the brokerage house F. H. Deacon and Co. Ltd., of Toronto, the underwriters of the issue and six persons.

Trading in shares of Victoria Wood and Revenue Properties were halted Monday before the Toronto Stock Exchange opened. The American Stock Exchange suspended trading in the company April 18.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto, New York Rally

The Toronto market posted its sharpest decline on record Monday and its 15th loss in the last 16 trading sessions.

Today volume started at an active pace but slackened in later trading.

Both the Montreal and Canadian exchanges were closed today to mark St. Jean Baptiste Day in Quebec.

AT TORONTO in industrials, Investors Overseas rose 5¼ to 45½, Bow Valley 4 to 32, Home A 3¾ to 62¼, Home B 2½ to 57 and Cominco 1⅜ to 33¾.

Victoria Wood fell 6½ to 9, Anthes A 6½ to 34, Revenue 4½ to 5⅝ and Scott Paper 4 to 21.

Pine Point was up 1¾ to 39, Northgate ⅞ to 14⅜, and Patino ¾ to 28¾.

Dome Mines dropped 4¾ to 67, Placer 1 to 35 and Denison 1 to 34.

Western Decalta was up $1.80 to $9, Great Plains 1½ to 29½, Banff 1⅜ to 14½ and Central-Del Rio 1 to 14½.

AT NEW YORK trading was fairly active near the close.

Gains led losses by better than 450 issues.

Prices near the close included Sperry and Hutchinson, up ⅜ at 44⅛; Fedders Corp., up 2 at 24⅞; Ashland Oil, up 1 at 42½; Natomas, up 4¼ at 99, and Northwest Industries, off ⅜ at 22.

Asamera Oil led the active issues on the American Stock Exchange, up 1¾ at 31⅜. Second most-active British petroleum gained ⅜.

AT LONDON the market extended Monday's rally, with British funds showing gains of up to ¼ point, reflecting the indications of a continuing credit squeeze contained in the government's letter of intent to the International Monetary Fund.

J. Lyons featured in equities with a rise in the ordinary share of 9s 3d to 84s 6d following news of its property revaluation. Elsewhere, gains of up to 2s were seen in Beecham, Dunlop and Courtaulds. Unilever was up 1s at 52s 3d.

The continuing weakness of oils was the main feature of a dull Canadian section. Dome Ex lost five points at 225, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas fell two points to 95, Syracuse dropped 2s 6d to 40s 3d and Triad eased ½ point to 11¼.

Trans-Canada Pipeline was three points off at 89¼, but Inco rose one point to 93. Nova Scotia was a weak spot in banks with a fall of 8s 9d to 191s 3d.

AT VANCOUVER the market held on to its firm tone in fairly quiet forenoon trading.

Buttle was up .55 to $5.80 and Alwin rose .30 to $2.40. Hearne, Omega and Venus each put on .15. Gains of .20 were made by Highmont and Silver Arrow.

Pacific Asbestos bucked the trend, losing .40 at $3.10. Integrated Wood lost .50 to $6.25 but Whonnock and EDP each climbed .50, to $16 and $9.50, respectively.

Western Realty, a new listing, traded 26,800 shares, settling at $6.62.

Calico Silver Mines has been suspended "pending clarification of the company's affairs." Neither Vancouver Stock Exchange nor Calico officials could be reached for comment.

GRAIN PRICES

An international house was buying both oilseeds with offerings from locals and commission houses. Flax continued on an easier pattern with all futures on fractional decline. Rapeseed posted fractional gains.

A fractionally easier rye trade had a small amount of scale down buying. Oats and barley prices were steady on domestic buying. Feed grains saw a little short covering.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IGA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged.

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans and wheat futures came under selling pressure on the Board of Trade today, giving up more than 1 cent a bushel in early dealings. Wheat losses later were trimmed. The decline in soybeans futures was principally in the nearby months.

The decline of wheat prices was attributed to some trade reports Canada intended to sell wheat to Argentina at a price considered under the international grains agreement level.

UNIVERSITIES CAUTIONED BY PUBLISHER

Change That Upheaval Image!

By BOB MITCHELL

Canadian universities are overdue for a change in their public image, a newspaper publisher told delegates at a University of Victoria symposium today.

Stuart Keate, of the Vancouver Sun, described how people not connected with the universities see them in the light of recent campus upheavals.

"It's a simple fact that four out of five Canadians never get to a university, and are inclined to view them with skepticism, if not hostility.

"I am sure we all shuddered two months ago when the number two man in Mr. Nixon's justice department, Richard Kliendienst, suggested that student radicals should be corralled and placed in detention camps.

"It's amazing how many sober and responsible Canadians thought the simplest solution to this problem would be to close the universities down."

However, Keate said there is considerable public sympathy toward student complaints of overcrowded classes, poor teaching and limited enrolment, especially at the University of B.C.

"When my daughter talks of attending a history class in the auditorium with a professor addressing 650 students over a microphone, I am astonished to realize this is equal to about half the total student population in the hungry 30s.

"Reflecting on those ancient times, I find it ironic that serenity at Point Grey was achieved in an era of truly grinding poverty, while sit-ins and mass protests occur in an atmosphere of affluence."

Keate said the key job facing the universities today is "to produce civilized, sensitive men and women who can live with one another.

"They will feel that the obscenities of our literature are minor and evanescent when compared to the obsenities of war, starvation and of big people pushing little people around."

Keate has been publisher of the Sun since 1964. He has also sat on the UBC senate and board of governors, but intends to retire due to a conflict with his newspaper interest.

The two-day Uvic symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society ended today.

Hairy Youth Doesn't Miff Educator, 74

Long hair, nudity and sexual promiscuity do not mean the younger generation is going to pot, Dr. Norman MacKenzie, former University of British Columbia president, said Monday.

"I'm not too concerned about the behavior or misbehavior of some of our radical students. I don't care whether they wear their hair to their knees."

Dr. MacKenzie spoke at a banquet of delegates attending the University of Victoria symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society.

He said the Depression had forced his own generation to be preoccupied with security and material goals, whereas the students of the affluent sixties are concerned with issues such as injustice and inequality.

CHASTITY NOT KEY

"Though I'm inclined to feel a case can be made for a measure of chastity in human relations, including marriage, it's not really a central issue—I think it can lead to happier lives than promiscuity.

"In respect to drugs I'm less happy. Until we get more detailed information on drugs we should be concerned that our young people are experimenting with them."

Dr. MacKenzie said Canadian universities should extend a welcome to American students and faculty members who decide to come to Canada.

He said social unrest in the U.S. is understandable, because it stems directly from opposition to the Vietnam war and racial oppression.

"It is not surprising that Canadian students, realizing the publicity they can get on radio and television, want to get in on the act.

"Happily, we don't have as many problems here, but we are becoming more and more a part of the U.S., not only because of the presence of so many Americans, but also because issues south of the border are being used by Canadian students."

Missing Roofing Delays Building Of Five Schools

By JIM HUME

Lack of steel roof decking is jeopardizing a $1 million five-school construction program in School District 63.

Brian Shaw, superintendent of buildings and grounds for the district, admitted this morning that work on five schools from Brentwood to Claremont is virtually at a standstill and will remain so until steel decking is delivered from Vancouver.

He termed the delivery delay by Westeel-Roscoe "inexcusable".

Five of six District 63 schools are feeling the pinch.

They, Keating's Elementary ($368,853); Brentwood ($290,378); Deep Cove, ($66,999); Saanichton ($96,022; and Claremont $111,981). A sixth school at Sidney ($210,884) is proceeding on schedule having received delivery of its roof decking.

Shaw said delays in delivery of the steel decking had placed the five schools well behind schedule.

"But," he added, "if the decking arrives on July 7 as we now predict, it can be installed by July 11 and then, with contractors and the architects working hard on a revised work schedule, we could get the jobs finished on time.

School Board Partly Blamed

"Everyone involved will have to work hard because there will be no time to spare. But it can be done."

While Shaw blames the Vancouver steel company for failing to deliver the steel decking on time, A. H. Ormiston, a member of the Amalgamated Construction Association regional committee, says much of the blame must rest with School District 63 school board.

"This is what happens when you split contracts," Ormiston said. "The steel company's contract is directly with the school board, not as it usually is with the general contractor.

"As a result the general contractor has no control over this particualr bid. The system, which may appear good on the surface, invites confusion.

"It can only be described as an unfortunate way of doing business."

Shaw admits to confusion but insists that from his end the program was clear cut and well-defined.

"We wrote Westeel on March 11 of this year informing them that they were low bidders and informing them of what we required in the way of performance," Shaw said. "There is no excuse for this kind of delay at this stage."

Until the decking arrives, interior work must be delayed with subsequent backing up of all parts of the program.

Shaw said he was originally assured that the steel decking would be on the construction sites by June 16. It is already eight days overdue, and Shaw expected july 7 delivery is just a "prediction."

"They assured me in June that all they needed was two or three days notice to get the steel over here," he said. "They said they had the material available in Vancouver.

"But there appears to have been some misunderstanding between the supplier and the contractor with the supplier saying he shop drawings for the decking had not been made available."

Other sources say the misunderstanding arose when the steel company made a package bid for the schools and understood that delivery of the steel would not be required until all schools had arrived at the roofing stage.

YARROWS DROPS 40 MORE

Forty more workers are out of jobs at Yarrows Ltd. shipyard.

Yarrows general manger John Wallace said the men—all welders—will be laid off today or Wednesday.

Last week the company laid off 43 shipfitters, nine burners and 10 helpers.

Wallace said rehiring should begin in about three weeks. It will take a while to build up—it always takes longer to rehire than to lay off, he said.

"Those laid off will be brought back if they're still available," he said.

Wallace disagreed with the proposal for a steel industry in British Columbia to prevent dependence on Japanese steel.

"We wouldn't have the sales to support it," he said.

Neil Hindle, business agent for Local 191, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Monday criticized federal and provincial governments for failing to encourage a steel industry in the west.

In spite of the delay of steel from Japan, and deadlines the company is facing, Wallace does not believe there is a threat of loss of contracts "at this point."

Police Take Over Exam Theft Probe

Investigation of the theft last week of departmental exams from Esquimalt Senior Secondary has been turned over to Esquimalt police.

Chief Earl Sarsiat said today the police investigation is "nearing a conclusion," but declined to say how many persons were involved in the theft.

He said if charges are laid against students under 18 they would be brought before juvenile court.

SUSPENSION

Esquimalt Senior Secondary principal Clive Kelly said the department of education's board of examiners would take steps to suspend the students' exam marks and graduation if they are found guilty.

The stolen exams were among those written between Monday and Thursday of last week.

An investigation committee formed by the school and the department learned the names of persons involved before turning the matter over to the board of examiners, who in turn called in police.

BLOOD CLINIC RESPONSE HALF-HEARTED

Only 101 donors went to Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street at a three-hour afternoon clinic.

The drive continues until Thursday and the aim is 725 pints.

Bryant Caught in the Open By Secret Council Meeting

Esquimalt council held a half-hour closed committee meeting Monday although Mayor Ray Bryant said earlier there would be no secret session.

The meeting was called after the open council meeting to discuss a land acquisition which arose out of an earlier traffic committee meeting.

Mayor Bryant said he was not aware this item was on the agenda when he spoke with the Times Monday morning.

Before council resolved itself into a secret committee of the whole to discuss the issue Bryant made a point of reading the bylaw which permits secrecy when dealing with land acquisition.

"Resolved that council go into a committee of the whole to discuss this land acquisition and in the opinion of council it is necessary in the public interest that only members of council and officers be present," he read.

The motion was passed unanimously.

Secrecy in council meetings became a public issue last week when Oak Bay council broke a 40-year tradition of secrecy after reporters refused to leave the closed committee of the whole meeting.

Esquimalt also has a tradition of going into secret session after council meetings but does so only after a formal motion has been passed. Oak Bay had been ignoring this technicality.

NO NOTICES

Bryant said Monday these secret meetings will continue in Esquimalt when council was dealing with land acquisitions, personnel or confidential federal or provincial government matters.

He also repeated his earlier statement that group A (fire, finance and zoning) and group B (parks, public works and traffic) committee meetings are open to the press.

However, neither reporters nor the public receive any advance notification of these meetings.

They are not held at regular intervals but whenever committee members feel there is enough business to warrant holding a meeting.

Mayors Voice Opposition To Early Hospital Vote

One member of the Capital Region District Hospital Board opposes any referendum this year on acute care hospital beds, while another would prefer a spring vote.

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant said Monday he would not support a new referendum until there is "visible evidence" of extended care beds approved in a 1968 referendum.

And Saanich's mayor, Hugh Curtis, said a spring referendum would have a better chance of approval, allowing time for a better outline of how the money would be spent, and for the extended care beds to begin construction.

They were reacting to an announcement Monday by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark that a new referendum would be ready by the end of 1969.

DECISIONS NEEDED

"I am not prepared to suport a referendum this year," Mayor Bryant said. "There are still about 10 decisions which have to be made" concerning allocation of beds under the 1968 referendum.

Mayor Curtis said a spring vote would have a better informed electorate.

"While it is important that the referendum be put at the earliest possible time, it will ask approval for a large amount of money. It should carry a fairly comprehensive outline of how the money is to be allocated."

He said a fall vote could prove harmful to hospital development.

ALLOCATIONS PROMISED

Mayor Bryant said he wanted the voters to see evidence of the $9.3 million extended care facilities before they're asked to vote again.

The health minister said all allocations of hospital beds under the 1968 referendum would be completed before the new referendum is put to the voters.

The acute bed referendum would call for an estimated $20-million to $30 million to be spent over the next six years on hospital additions in this area.

GOT A GRIPE ON TRAFFIC?

Do other people's driving habits drive you crazy and leave you frustrated?

The Greater Victoria and District Safety Council would like to hear from the public on how to improve driver and pedestrian safety.

In doing so they feel they could act as an accident prevention ombudsman.

They want people to write them about traffic problems.

They want you to vent your wrath on bicyclists, drivers and passengers of cars and motorcycles, horseback riders and pedestrians.

Meanwhile, the British Columbia Automobile Association, in preparation for the July 1 holiday weekend and as part of their "Bring 'Em Back Alive" campaign, has released some suggestions they think drivers should follow.

Drivers not in top emotional and physical condition should stay at home.

Fresh air in the car, whistling, "rock 'n' roll" or martial music help to keep a driver from becoming drowsy on long trips.

A comfortable seat position and regular rest periods keep drivers alert and aware of other persons' driving.

Fire Strikes Inn Again

A faulty temperature control device started the second kitchen fire within a week today at the Queen Victoria Inn, 655 Douglas.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said the device, contained in a deep fat fryer, was supposed to have been fixed following the first fire.

About $300 damage was done in the blaze this morning.

After a $450 fire Friday, the device was sent to be fixed and later re-installed. However, the deputy said the electrician apparently didn't find the trouble and sent it back thinking it was repaired.

The kitchen will be out of operation for a few days and the deputy said he had suggested a new device be purchased.

Arthur Mayse . . .

Follow Interurban Road southeast past Hyacinth Park, and you come to a little wooden bridge. Beneath this bridge, Colquitz Creek threads a narrow valley which for years was choked by brush.

The creek itself was more guessed at than seen. Rank grass drooped into it, thickets overhung it, and its surface was scummed with pondweed.

Today, the creek runs free beneath its bridge. For about 200 yards upstream, the east slope has been cleared except where some young axeman decided that a clump or a tree was worth saving.

Even without further improvement, that strip of Saanich municipal land will make a pleasant picnic site. But please, if you use it, leave no litter behind to mar a scene that cost much toil and sweat, and even a little blood.

Although the project hatched by practical visionary Joe Pilot and approved by Saanich parksmen is a mere nick in the Colquitz restoration, it points the way to further ribbon-park development.

Also it shows what can be accomplished when a bunch of keen volunteers decides that self-help beats waiting around for a hard-pressed municipal government to act.

The cleanup began last Thursday morning. On Saturday afternoon, when we drove over to see if there was room in the ranks for two more brush-whackers, those same volunteers had turned in about $600 worth of labor at municipal rates.

A couple of kids in a yellow smallboat were raking weed from the creek. Occasionally the rakes brought up junk from the stream bed to enlarge a pile on the shore.

Across the creek, some boys were noisily laying into lush growth with machetes. Upslope on our side, was a headquarters of sorts. Someone had lugged a table in from the road. It supported a camp stove on which a pot of beans simmered.

At one end of the table, St. John Ambulance senior Mrs. Reindeer Schuitema of 5307 Patricia Bay Highway and Cadet Debbie Dwyer of 569 Baker Street had set up a first-aid post.

From farther along the creek came the steady chunking of edged tools against wood.

Joe Pilot, who possibly started life with a more workaday but less symbolic name, wasn't around. Barry Billan of 1160 Burdette explained procedure to us.

There was no formal organization. Everyone chose his own job and handled it as he saw fit. Still, if our thing happened to be grubbing out roots, here were parks department tools, and yonder a patch that bristled with sapling stubs.

About 40 of us were strung along the creek, working under a cloudy sky pierced by occasional sunshine. Bouncing a mattock off stubborn roots, I wondered if the work-bees old people tell of were marked by the same cheerful camaraderie.

It was Payne who had fetched camp stove, beans and a mound of buns to the site.

He'd looked in on the work party several times, and liked what he saw going on there.

"So I felt the least I could do was come out and feed 'em," he told us.

Among others who shared his feeling were Lorne Ebell of Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, and his wife, Barbara. The two put their Saturday into lending a hand with a job they thoroughly approved.

Colquitz and Craigflower are streams too good to lose, Lorne pointed out. This limited drive to salvage one little valley was start in the right direction.

Saanich, said municipal works foreman Frank Andrews, may put a waterweed cutter along the opened stretch of creek. That move would carry the reclamation a stage farther.

Perhaps it will continue like that, in fits and starts over the next few years.

In any case, it's worth remembering that the job was begun as a community project, by people who didn't seek or receive a nickel for their labors.

GNP Up 2.5% During Winter

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's gross national product—the market value of all goods and services produced by the country—rose by 2.5 per cent in the first three months of 1969 to reach an annual rate of $71,884,000,000 a year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The GNP for 1968 was $67,368,000,000, and Finance Minister Edgar Benson said in his June 10 budget speech he expects it to rise by about nine per cent this year. In the last three months of 1968 it was running at $70,152,000,000.

The 2.5-per-cent increase in the first quarter of 1969 included increases of about 1.5 per cent in real production and of about one per cent in price levels. This price rise was slightly greater than in the last quarter of 1968.

DBS said intensified demand pressures on the economy by most sectors was a feature of the first three months of 1969. These were partially met by a substantial increase in imports.

"Larger advances than in the fourth quarter occurred in personal expenditure, business gross fixed capital formation and exports, together with increased investment in business non-farm inventories.

"On the other hand, government purchases of goods and services rose only slightly and accumulation of farm inventories declined sharply, in part the result of much higher wheat exports."

DBS said personal expenditures rose three per cent, a substantial increase. Spending was higher on all principal products except automobiles and tobacco.

Personal spending outran increases in personal after-tax incomes, resulting in a sharp decline in personal saving.

There was a 10-per-cent increase in new residential construction which contributed to a 3½-per-cent increase in gross fixed capital formation—which includes new industrial plant and equipment as well as housing.

There was a five-per-cent increase in purchases of machinery and equipment, but a three-per-cent drop in non-residential construction.

On the incomes side of the national ledger, labor income was up three per cent. Employment rose by 1.5 per cent and the unemployment rate declined in the first quarter of 1969 to 4.2 per cent of the labor force from 4.9 per cent in the last quarter of 1968.

PROFITS WERE DOWN

Corporation profits before taxes were down slightly from their high fourth-quarter level after depreciation charges were taken into account. Profits before depreciation charges were up 1.5 per cent.

Prices—measured in the national accounts to cover all prices and not just consumer retail prices—rose one per cent in the first quarter of 1969, after an increase of eight tenths of one per cent in the previous three months.

DBS said the rate of price increase was higher in exports and in government expenditures, but lower for personal expenditures. Price change in imports and business expenditures on fixed capital remained about the same between the last three months of 1968 and the first three of this year.

On the basis of the 1957 dollar—the benchmark against which price changes are measured—the gross national product in the first quarter of 1969 ran at an annual rate of $53,716,000,000, compared with $52,956,000,000 in the final quarter of last year and $51,451,000,000 for all of 1968.

Lumber Firm Purchases Wescraft

Purchase of Victoria-based Wescraft Manufacturing Otd., 2811 Douglas, by Moore Whittington Lumber Ltd., 2614 Bridge, has been completed.

Wescraft referred all inquiries to Moore Whittington principals, none of whom were available for comment.

The acquisition had been rumored for several weeks, although the Moore Whittington name had not been mentioned.

FIFTEEN YEARS OLD

Wescraft was established about 15 years ago by Wes Bentley to make window sash from extruded aluminum stock. It developed other aluminum products for the building industry, perfecting an assembly-line method of welding aluminum, and installing anodizing and enamelling facilities for corrosion-resistant door and window products.

It expanded its sales and warehousing facilities to the lower mainland and its manufacturing to a new plant in Saanich, maintaining head office on Douglas Street.

Moore Whittington is a long-established building supply business on southern Vancouver Island, which until about 10 years was also engaged in lumber production now absorbed by B.C. Forest Products Ltd., sawmill division. President is Ron Whittington.

handle 1,000 vehicles a day it only totals 5,000 approved before deadline. That leaves anywhere from 5,000 to 6,000 cars without their approved stickers and subject to legislation which sets the minimum penalty at a $10 fine.

Officials were still looking on the positive side.

"All cars can definitely be handled provided they don't come in during peak periods," a spokesman said.

He said things are being partially slowed by drivers with valid stickers who are jamming line-ups with non-approved cars.

Any stickers which show an expiry date of Sept. 9 or earlier are good for an additional six months and drivers should avoid the testing station like the plague, he said.

Humanity Said in Danger From Environment Crisis

By ROBERT H. ESTABROOK
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — Unless man soon grapples with a growing crisis in the human environment the future of life on earth could be endangered, Secretary General U Thant declared in the introduction to a report on environmental problems released Monday.

Major factors making for crisis, the report says, are explosive population growth, the vastly increased flow of people to the cities with attendant urban problems, and accelerated technology placing new demands on agricultural land and other natural resources.

The report is part of the preparation for a world conference on the environment, proposed for Stockholm in 1970, following General Assembly adoption of a Swedish suggestion. The Economic and Social Council will consider the report in July.

In addition to citing the dangers from DDT and other mass pesticides, the report noted that pollution is among the most serious side-effects of the new technology.

Increased reliance upon the combustion of fossil fuels has brought a 10 per cent increase in atmospheric carbon dioxide in the past century, it asserts. An increase to 25 per cent by the end of this century could take place, with potentially "catastrophic" effects on world weather and climate.

Waste products are a major source of pollution, the report states. In the United States these include 142 million tons of smoke and noxious fumes annually, 7 million junked automobiles and 48 billion tin cans.

. . . TREATMENT PLANTS

could always consider treatment plants," he said.

The health board is going to pursue the question, and a special meeting might be called next week, Elphick said.

"I am satisfied he did study the matter."

Dr. Whitbread said he thinks the health minister's decision "is final as far as the minister is concerned."

Asked whether the decision is final as far as the health board is concerned, Dr. Whitbread said:

"We'll have to wait until the board meets again in September to know that."

In turning down the health board request, Loffmark made good a promise made last October that he would take a "hard line against any opposition to primary treatment plants."

"Make no mistake about it," he said. "Either municipalities will provide satisfactory plants or no sewage construction certificates will be issued."

The initial decision in April this year to permit the Macaulay Point sewer extension without primary treatment while disallowing McMicking and Clover Point resulted in a bitter reaction from Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen and Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hawes.

Stephen called it a "totally irrational decision."

A primary treatment plant at Clover Point in Victoria would cost an additional $2.5 million.

In his policy statement last year Loffmark declared that it would not be in the public interest to grant sewer construction certificates unless "a minimum of primary treatment is provided."

Phone Supervisors Ready If Strike Reaches Island

Supervisiory personnel at Island exchanges of B.C. Telephone have been put on full alert in case of walkouts by regular staff, a company spokesman said today.

Glynn Jones, Victoria-based public information officer, said supervisors have been given crash courses in handling equipment in the event of a walkout.

"I'm confident we'll be able to duplicate activities on the mainland, with supervisory staff taking over at the switchboards to keep services in smooth and efficient operation," he said.

He said local company officials are still awaiting developments in the mainland strike that Monday took members of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers out of exchanges from Squamish to Hope.

On the lower mainland the striking workers are confining their activity for the present to the Fraser Valley, Vancouver and Howe Sound.

POLICY MAKERS

Bert Johns, one of three general secretaries of the federation who act as strike policy makers, said the next move in the dispute is up to B.C. Telephone.

He said federal mediator D. S. Tysoe met with him briefly Monday night after taking with management spokesmen, but no sign of a break was forthcoming.

The strike was called for Monday morning after contract negotiations collapsed Saturday.

Telephone workers representing 6,200 plant, clerical and traffic employees of B.C. Telephone rejected a conciliation report prospósing a 17.5 per cent wage increase over two years.

The federation asked for 32.1 per cent, plus fringe benefits.

Meanwhile mainland supervisory staff face more 12-hour shifts doing unfamiliar jobs normally handled by 3,800 regular workers.

IN OTHER AREAS

There was no indication of plans to pull out workers in other areas, however.

The union had said it would use rotation strikes, a series of hit-and-run stoppages by large or small groups of its 6,200 members.

Supervisors were at the switchboards Monday. There were delays and foulups in handling calls but the company said the 120 men, doing work normally performed by 180-190 perators, were speeding up.

"These men have never seen a switchboard in their lives before this," said one company official.

The B.C. Federation of Telephone Employees said it had not decided how long the lower mainland strike will last. Employees could be sent back at short notice and others called out elsewhere.

The area covered by the strike Monday included the heavily-populated greater Vancouver area.

The conciliation officer held out no hope for settlement unless both sides ease positions. Current wages range from $1.45 an hour to $5.98 in a wide range of jobs.

subcommittee members the impact on the weapons production schedule would last "a few months to perhaps a year," according to preliminary estimates.

Senator Allen Ellender (Dem. La.) asked Giller: "Will this fire retard you in the production of all missiles?"

Giller's immediate words in reply were deleted from the published transcript but then he said: "We are estimating at this moment six months plus or minus three, meaning a maximum of maybe nine."

Dr. Glenn Seaborg, AEC chairman, termed the $45,000,000 request to get the Rocky Flats plant back into operation "very urgent."

"If we didn't receive the additional appropriation it would delay by an undetermined amount the production dates (deleted)," Seaborg said.

Senator Robert Byrd (Dem. W. Va.), chairman of the appropriations subcommittee, told a reporter Monday night: "I regard this as a serious situation."

Giller said the disruption of Rocky Flats work would not affect the Nixon administration's 1974 deployment schedule for the proposed Safeguard missile defence system.

If you go from rum to rum looking for a really light one, look no further.

Here's Maraca Extra Light Rum.

Some rums belong back when men were men and rum was a way to keep from freezing.

People today look for a rum that's smooth, mellow, mixable and above all light.

Then just say 'Maraca White Label Rum'. It's extra light.

Maraca Black Label and Gold Label. Dark and Gold in colour, but both light in flavour.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Cloud blanketed all areas this morning as B.C. lies under a layer of cool Pacific air. Showers are expected throughout the province but they will be widely scattered on the south coast. Some drying of the air will occur for Wednesday and most areas will have sunny periods. Temperatures, however, will remain cool.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

In Canada in summer, the people love that warm weather. In Edmonton, for example, the girls flounce around in short, short skirts in 65-degree weather and the boys all go short-sleeved. And they love the long hours of daylight, when the sun sets between 9 and 10 p.m.

The summer-loving Albertans don't mind at all when the morning sky starts to get bright at about 3 a.m. The sunlight is wonderful after a winter when they saw sunlight mostly in the middle of the day. But the long hours of daylight are hard on visitors from the south.

A Texan, for example, who goes to bed at midnight in Red Deer, Alberta, is bound to wake up a few hours later as the summer daylight arrives. From then on, until it's time to get up at 7 or 8, he may sleep fitfully, squeezing his eyes against the daylight that filters in around the heaviest draperies.

In the winter, of course, he can sleep in the dark from mid-afternoon to well along into the working hours of the morning.

Every region of North America has its own special weather.

Film on Good Life, Gaglardi on Agenda

The film is the government-financed "The Good Life" which extols the beauties of life in British Columbia. Opposition Leader Tom Berger has attacked the film as "Socred propoganda."

The minister is Philip Gaglardi, who will be guest speaker.

Esquimalt Socreds are expected to nominate deputy speaker Herb Bruch, who has held the riding since 1953.

The New Democratic Party, on May 12, chose taxi operator James Gorst as Esquimalt candidate.

Gorst, who was president of the Esquimalt-Saanich Federal Liberal Association from 1960 to 1968 bolted to the NDP after being refused the federal liberal nomination for the 1968 election.

He won the Liberal nomination at a nomination meeting at which he was chairman. His candidacy was over-ruled and at a later meeting David Anderson won the nomination.

Anderson also won the election in the Trudeau sweep of June 1968.

The Liberals have not yet chosen a candidate, following a policy of waiting until an election has been called or appears imminent before choosing candidates in the lower Island area.

Although Premier Bennett has said the odds are 60-40 in favor of an election this year he has also said an election is more likely next year than this year.

The Liberal candidate in the 1966 provincial election won by Bruch, David Elrix, has moved out of the riding and is not expected to seek the nomination.

No Solution in Sight On Taxation Issue

Oak Bay Mayor Fred Hawes and provincial assessor Percy Wright met for a discussion on Oak Bay assessments this morning.

Mayor Hawes said the meeting was requested by Oak Bay "to discuss the formula policy on assessments."

"At this point there doesn't seem to be any easy answer to the problem."

He was referring to the complaints received from taxpayers who had received abnormally high increases in their 1969 assessments.

He said council will continue its study of the assessment situation.

"We're compiling information on the letters we've received, and the rolls."

The provincial assessor, he added, had recommended no solution.

When the study is completed, the mayor added, details will be released at a council meeting.

Slayer Sentenced

VANCOUVER (CP) — Larry Wayne Tomlinson, 21, described by a psychiatrist as an aggressive psychopath, was sentenced Monday to 15 years for slaying Ceona Lalond, 57, of Powell River, B.C. Tomlinson pleaded guilty in the British Columbia Supreme Court to manslaughter in the Nov. 20 killing in which the woman, who had befriended him, received more than 30 stab wounds.

Will Probe Charges

TORONTO (CP) — A hearing July 8 will probe charges by the Ontario Securities Commission that Victoria Wood Development Corp. Ltd., filed a false and misleading certificate in its prospectus when it offered $4,800,000 worth of shares for sale.

Charges were also laid against the parent company, Revenue Properties Co. Ltd., the brokerage house F. H. Deacon and Co. Ltd., of Toronto, the underwriters of the issue and six persons.

Trading in shares of Victoria Wood and Revenue Properties were halted Monday before the Toronto Stock Exchange opened. The American Stock Exchange suspended trading in the company April 18.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Toronto, New York Rally

The Toronto market posted its sharpest decline on record Monday and its 15th loss in the last 16 trading sessions.

Today volume started at an active pace but slackened in later trading.

Both the Montreal and Canadian exchanges were closed today to mark St. Jean Baptiste Day in Quebec.

AT TORONTO in industrials, Investors Overseas rose 5¼ to 45½, Bow Valley 4 to 32, Home A 3¾ to 62¼, Home B 2½ to 57 and Cominco 1⅜ to 33¾.

Victoria Wood fell 6½ to 9, Anthes A 6½ to 34, Revenue 4½ to 5⅝ and Scott Paper 4 to 21.

Pine Point was up 1¾ to 39, Northgate ⅞ to 14⅝, and Patino ¾ to 28¾.

Dome Mines dropped 4¾ to 67, Placer 1 to 35 and Denison 1 to 34.

Western Decalta was up $1.80 to $9, Great Plains 1½ to 29½, Banff 1⅜ to 14½ and Central-Del Rio 1 to 14½.

AT NEW YORK trading was fairly active near the close.

Gains led losses by better than 450 issues.

Prices near the close included Sperry and Hutchinson, up ⅜ at 44⅛; Fedders Corp., up 2 at 24⅞; Ashland Oil, up 1 at 42½; Natomas, up 4¼ at 99, and Northwest Industries, off ⅜ at 22.

Asamera Oil led the active issues on the American Stock Exchange, up 1¾ at 31⅜. Second most-active British petroleum gained ⅜.

AT LONDON the market extended Monday's rally, with British funds showing gains of up to ¼ point, reflecting the indications of a continuing credit squeeze contained in the government's letter of intent to the International Monetary Fund.

J. Lyons featured in equities with a rise in the ordinary share of 9s 3d to 84s 6d following news of its property revaluation. Elsewhere, gains of up to 2s were seen in Beecham, Dunlop and Courtaulds. Unilever was up 1s at 52s 3d.

The continuing weakness of oils was the main feature of a dull Canadian section. Dome Ex lost five points at 225, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas fell two points to 95, Syracuse dropped 2s 6d to 40s 3d and Triad eased ½ point to 11¼.

Trans-Canada Pipeline was three points off at 89¼, but Inco rose one point to 93. Nova Scotia was a weak spot in banks with a fall of 8s 9d to 191s 3d.

AT VANCOUVER the market held on to its firm tone in fairly quiet forenoon trading.

Buttle was up .55 to $5.80 and Alwin rose .30 to $2.40. Hearne, Omega and Venus each put on .15. Gains of .20 were made by Highmont and Silver Arrow.

Pacific Asbestos bucked the trend, losing .40 at $3.10. Integrated Wood lost .50 to $6.25 but Whonnock and EDP each climbed .50, to $16 and $9.50, respectively.

Western Realty, a new listing, traded 26,800 shares, settling at $6.62.

Calico Silver Mines has been suspended "pending clarification of the company's affairs." Neither Vancouver Stock Exchange nor Calico officials could be reached for comment.

UNIVERSITIES CAUTIONED BY PUBLISHER

Change That Upheaval Image!

By BOB MITCHELL

Canadian universities are overdue for a change in their public image, a newspaper publisher told delegates at a University of Victoria symposium today.

Stuart Keate, of the Vancouver Sun, described how people not connected with the universities see them in the light of recent campus upheavals.

"It's a simple fact that four out of five Canadians never get to a university, and are inclined to view them with skepticism, if not hostility.

"I am sure we all shuddered two months ago when the number two man in Mr. Nixon's justice department, Richard Kliendienst, suggested that student radicals should be corralled and placed in detention camps.

"It's amazing how many sober and responsible Canadians thought the simplest solution to this problem would be to close the universities down."

However, Keate said there is considerable public sympathy toward student complaints of overcrowded classes, poor teaching and limited enrolment, especially at the University of B.C.

"When my daughter talks of attending a history class in the auditorium with a professor addressing 650 students over a microphone, I am astonished to realize this is equal to about half the total student population in the hungry 30s.

"Reflecting on those ancient times, I find it ironic that serenity at Point Grey was achieved in an era of truly grinding poverty, while sit-ins and mass protests occur in an atmosphere of affluence."

Keate said the key job facing the universities today is "to produce civilized, sensitive men and women who can live with one another.

"They will feel that the obscenities of our literature are minor and evanescent when compared to the obsenities of war, starvation and of big people pushing little people around."

Keate has been publisher of the Sun since 1964. He has also sat on the UBC senate and board of governors, but intends to retire due to a conflict with his newspaper interest.

The two-day Uvic symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society ended today.

Bryant Caught in the Open By Secret Council Meeting

Esquimalt council held a half-hour closed committee meeting Monday although Mayor Ray Bryant said earlier there would be no secret session.

The meeting was called after the open council meeting to discuss a land acquisition which arose out of an earlier traffic committee meeting.

Mayor Bryant said he was not aware this item was on the agenda when he spoke with the Times Monday morning.

Before council resolved itself into a secret committee of the whole to discuss the issue Bryant made a point of reading the bylaw which permits secrecy when dealing with land acquisition.

"Resolved that council go into a committee of the whole to discuss this land acquisition and in the opinion of council it is necessary in the public interest that only members of council and officers be present," he read.

The motion was passed unanimously.

Secrecy in council meetings became a public issue last week when Oak Bay council broke a 40-year tradition of secrecy after reporters refused to leave the closed committee of the whole meeting.

Esquimalt also has a tradition of going into secret session after council meetings but does so only after a formal motion has been passed. Oak Bay had been ignoring this technicality.

NO NOTICES

Bryant said Monday these secret meetings will continue in Esquimalt when council was dealing with land acquisitions, personnel or confidential federal or provincial government matters.

He also repeated his earlier statement that group A (fire, finance and zoning) and group B (parks, public works and traffic) committee meetings are open to the press.

However, neither reporters nor the public receive any advance notification of these meetings.

They are not held at regular intervals but whenever committee members feel there is enough business to warrant holding a meeting.

Bryant suggested reporters call municipal engineer William Gerry to find out when these meetings will be held.

Mayors Voice Opposition To Early Hospital Vote

One member of the Capital Region District Hospital Board opposes any referendum this year on acute care hospital beds, while another would prefer a spring vote.

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant said Monday he would not support a new referendum until there is "visible evidence" of extended care beds approved in a 1968 referendum.

And Saanich's mayor, Hugh Curtis, said a spring referendum would have a better chance of approval, allowing time for a better outline of how the money would be spent, and for the extended care beds to begin construction.

They were reacting to an announcement Monday by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark that a new referendum would be ready by the end of 1969.

DECISIONS NEEDED

"I am not prepared to suport a referendum this year," Mayor Bryant said. "There are still about 10 decisions which have to be made" concerning allocation of beds under the 1968 referendum.

Mayor Curtis said a spring vote would have a better informed electorate.

"While it is important that the referendum be put at the earliest possible time, it will ask approval for a large amount of money. It should carry a fairly comprehensive outline of how the money is to be allocated."

He said a fall vote could prove harmful to hospital development.

ALLOCATIONS PROMISED

Mayor Bryant said he wanted the voters to see evidence of the $9.3 million extended care facilities before they're asked to vote again.

The health minister said all allocations of hospital beds under the 1968 referendum would be completed before the new referendum is put to the voters.

The acute bed referendum would call for an estimated $20 million to $30 million to be spent over the next six years on hospital additions in this area.

GOT A GRIPE ON TRAFFIC?

Do other people's driving habits drive you crazy and leave you frustrated?

Do your own skills behind the wheel leave something to be desired?

The Greater Victoria and District Safety Council would like to hear from the public on how to improve driver and pedestrian safety.

In doing so they feel they could act as an accident prevention ombudsman.

They want people to write them about traffic problems.

They want you to vent your wrath on bicyclists, drivers and passengers of cars and motorcycles, horseback riders and pedestrians.

Meanwhile, the British Columbia Automobile Association, in preparation for the July 1 holiday weekend and as part of their "Bring 'Em Back Alive" campaign, has released some suggestions they think drivers should follow.

Drivers not in top emotional and physical condition should stay at home.

Fresh air in the car, whistling, "rock 'n' roll" or martial music help to keep a driver from becoming drowsy on long trips.

A comfortable seat position and regular rest periods keep drivers alert and aware of other persons' driving.

Fire Strikes Inn Again

A faulty temperature control device started the second kitchen fire within a week today at the Queen Victoria Inn, 655 Douglas.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said the device, contained in a deep fat fryer, was supposed to have been fixed following the first fire.

About $300 damage was done in the blaze this morning.

After a $450 fire Friday, the device was sent to be fixed and later re-installed. However, the deputy said the electrician apparently didn't find the trouble and sent it back thinking it was repaired.

The kitchen will be out of operation for a few days and the deputy said he had suggested a new device be purchased.

Hairy Youth Doesn't Miff Educator, 74

Long hair, nudity and sexual promiscuity do not mean the younger generation is going to pot, Dr. Norman MacKenzie, 74, former University of British Columbia president, said Monday.

"I'm not too concerned about the behavior or misbehavior of some of our radical students. I don't care whether they wear their hair to their knees."

Dr. MacKenzie spoke at a banquet of delegates attending the University of Victoria symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society.

He said the Depression had forced his own generation to be preoccupied with security and material goals, whereas the students of the affluent sixties are concerned with issues such as injustice and inequality.

CHASTITY NOT KEY

"Though I'm inclined to feel a case can be made for a measure of chastity in human relations, including marriage, it's not really a central issue—I think it can lead to happier lives than promiscuity.

"In respect to drugs I'm less happy. Until we get more detailed information on drugs we should be concerned that our young people are experimenting with them."

Dr. MacKenzie said Canadian universities should extend a welcome to American students and faculty members who decide to come to Canada.

He said social unrest in the U.S. is understandable, because it stems directly from opposition to the Vietnam war and racial oppression.

"It is not surprising that Canadian students, realizing the publicity they can get on radio and television, want to get in on the act.

"Happily, we don't have as many problems here, but we are becoming more and more a part of the U.S., not only because of the presence of so many Americans, but also because issues south of the border are being used by Canadian students."

Missing Roofing Delays Building Of Five Schools

By JIM HUME

Lack of steel roof decking is jeopardizing a $1 million five-school construction program in School District 63.

Brian Shaw, superintendent of buildings and grounds for the district, admitted this morning that work on five schools from Brentwood to Claremont is virtually at a standstill and will remain so until steel decking is delivered from Vancouver.

He termed the delivery delay by Westeel-Roscoe "inexcusable".

Five of six District 63 schools are feeling the pinch.

They, Keating's Elementary ($368,853); Brentwood ($290,378); Deep Cove, ($66,999); Saanichton ($96,002) and Claremont ($111,981). A sixth school at Sidney ($210,884) is proceeding on schedule having received delivery of its roof decking.

Shaw said delays in delivery of the steel decking had placed the five schools well behind schedule.

"But," he added, "if the decking arrives on July 7 as we now predict, it can be installed by July 11 and then, with contractors and the architects working hard on a revised work schedule, we could get the jobs finished on time.

School Board Partly Blamed

"Everyone involved will have to work hard because there will be no time to spare. But it can be done."

While Shaw blames the Vancouver steel company for failing to deliver the steel decking on time, A. H. Ormiston, a member of the Amalgamated Construction Association regional committee, says much of the blame must rest with School District 63 school board.

"This is what happens when you split contracts," Ormiston said. "The steel company's contract is directly with the school board, not as it usually is with the general contractor.

"As a result the general contractor has no control over this particular bid. The system, which may appear good on the surface, invites confusion.

"It can only be described as an unfortunate way of doing business."

Shaw admits to confusion but insists that from his end the program was clear cut and well-defined.

"We wrote Westeel on March 11 of this year informing them that they were low bidders and informing them of what we required in the way of performance," Shaw said. "There is no excuse for this kind of delay at this stage."

Until the decking arrives, interior work must be delayed with subsequent backing up of all parts of the program.

Shaw said he was originally assured that the steel decking would be on the construction sites by June 16. It is already eight days overdue, and Shaw expected July 7 delivery is just a "prediction."

"They assured me in June that all they needed was two or three days notice to get the steel over here," he said. "They said they had the material available in Vancouver.

"But there appears to have been some misunderstanding between the supplier and the contractor with the supplier saying the shop drawings for the decking had not been made available."

Other sources say the misunderstanding arose when the steel company made a package bid for the schools and understood that delivery of the steel would not be required until all schools had arrived at the roofing stage.

YARROWS DROPS 40 MORE

Forty more workers are out of jobs at Yarrows Ltd. shipyard.

Yarrows general manger John Wallace said the men—all welders—will be laid off today or Wednesday.

Last week the company laid off 43 shipfitters, nine burners and 10 helpers.

Wallace said rehiring should begin in about three weeks. It will take a while to build up—it always takes longer to rehire than to lay off, he said.

"Those laid off will be brought back if they're still available," he said.

Wallace disagreed with the proposal for a steel industry in British Columbia to prevent dependence on Japanese steel.

"We wouldn't have the sales to support it," he said.

Neil Hindle, business agent for Local 191, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Monday criticized federal and provincial governments for failing to encourage a steel industry in the west.

In spite of the delay of steel from Japan, and deadlines the company is facing, Wallace does not believe there is a threat of loss of contracts "at this point."

Police Take Over Exam Theft Probe

Investigation of the theft last week of departmental exams from Esquimalt Senior Secondary has been turned over to Esquimalt police.

Chief Earl Sarsiat said today the police investigation is "nearing a conclusion," but declined to say how many persons were involved in the theft.

He said if charges are laid against students under 18 they would be brought before juvenile court.

SUSPENSION

Esquimalt Senior Secondary principal Clive Kelly said the department of education's board of examiners would take steps to suspend the students' exam marks and graduation if they are found guilty.

The stolen exams were among those written between Monday and Thursday of last week.

An investigation committee formed by the school and the department learned the names of persons involved before turning the matter over to the board of examiners, who in turn called in police.

BLOOD CLINIC RESPONSE HALF-HEARTED

Only 101 donors went to Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street at a three-hour afternoon clinic.

The drive continues until Thursday and the aim is 725 pints.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you give me the address of Edward Kennedy Ellington, better known as Duke? M.C.

A. Duke Ellington's address is: 52 West 58th Street, New York City, 10019, U.S.A.

Arthur Mayse . . .

Follow Interurban Road southeast past Hyacinth Park, and you come to a little wooden bridge. Beneath this bridge, Colquitz Creek threads a narrow valley which for years was choked by brush.

The creek itself was more guessed at than seen. Rank grass drooped into it, thickets overhung it, and its surface was scummed with pondweed.

Today, the creek runs free beneath its bridge. For about 200 yards upstream, the east slope has been cleared except where some young axeman decided that a clump or a tree was worth saving.

Even without further improvement, that strip of Saanich municipal land will make a pleasant picnic site. But please, if you use it, leave no litter behind to mar a scene that cost much toil and sweat, and even a little blood.

Although the project hatched by practical visionary Joe Pilot and approved by Saanich parksmen is a mere nick in the Colquitz restoration, it points the way to further ribbon-park development.

Also it shows what can be accomplished when a bunch of keen volunteers decides that self-help beats waiting around for a hard-pressed municipal government to act.

The cleanup began last Thursday morning. On Saturday afternoon, when we drove over to see if there was room in the ranks for two more brush-whackers, those same volunteers had turned in about $600 worth of labor at municipal rates.

A couple of kids in a yellow smallboat were raking weed from the creek. Occasionally the rakes brought up junk from the stream bed to enlarge a pile on the shore.

Across the creek, some boys were noisily laying into lush growth with machetes. Upslope on our side, was a headquarters of sorts. Someone had lugged a table in from the road. It supported a camp stove on which a pot of beans simmered.

At one end of the table, St. John Ambulance senior Mrs. Reindeer Schuitema of 5307 Patricia Bay Highway and Cadet Debbie Dwyer of 569 Baker Street had set up a first-aid post.

From farther along the creek came the steady chunking of edged tools against wood.

Joe Pilot, who possibly started life with a more workaday but less symbolic name, wasn't around. Barry Billan of 1160 Burdette explained procedure to us.

There was no formal organization. Everyone chose his own job and handled it as he saw fit. Still, if our thing happened to be grubbing out roots, here were parks department tools, and yonder a patch that bristled with sapling stubs.

About 40 of us were strung along the creek, working under a cloudy sky pierced by occasional sunshine. Bouncing a mattock off stubborn roots, I wondered if the work-bees old people tell of were marked by the same cheerful camaraderie.

It was Payne who had fetched camp stove, beans and a mound of buns to the site.

He'd looked in on the work party several times, and liked what he saw going on there.

"So I felt the least I could do was come out and feed 'em," he told us.

Among others who shared his feeling were Lorne Ebell of Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, and his wife, Barbara. The two put their Saturday into lending a hand with a job they thoroughly approved.

Colquitz and Craigflower are streams too good to lose, Lorne pointed out. This limited drive to salvage one little valley was a start in the right direction.

Saanich, said municipal works foreman Frank Andrews, may put a waterweed cutter along the opened stretch of creek. That move would carry the reclamation a stage farther.

Perhaps it will continue like that, in fits and starts over the next few years.

In any case, it's worth remembering that the job was begun as a community project, by people who didn't seek or receive a nickel for their labors.
